VIRGINIAN AND PARISIAN HAVE NO SURVIVORS ABOARD; DEAD IN TITANIC DISASTER ESTIMATED AT 1,341

DAY BRINGS LITTLE TO LESSEN HORROR

Save for 868 Picked Up by Carpathian, All Aboard Magnificent Steamer Went Down to Watery Grave.

MEN OF GREAT PROMINENCE MISSING

Hope for Details of Disaster Centers in Rescue Steamer Due in New York on Thursday Night.

The appalling magnitude of the wreck of the giant liner Titanic, has been but little mitigated by the fragmentary information which has filtered in today.

The rescuing steamer, Carpathia, has 868 survivors on board, according to the latest news received at the offices of the White Star line in New York. But except for this, the favorable details are insignificant, compared with the supreme fact that the Titanic is at the bottom of the Atlantic and that the shattered wreck took with her 1,341 victims to their death.

FINAL HOPE IS DISPELLED.

Hope clung desperately this morning to the belief that the steamers Virginian and Parisian, of the Allan line, may have picked up survivors in addition to those on board the Carpathia, but this was practically dispelled at 11 o'clock, when the Sable Island wireless station reported that the Parisian had no survivors on board, and when the officers of the Allan line in Montreal issued a statement that the captain of the Virginian had sent them a wireless message saying he had "arrived at the scene of disaster too late to be of service."

Both the Virginian and the Parisian, therefore, appear to hold out no hope of further reducing the extent of the calamity. The Virginian has proceeded on her way for Europe.

REACHES NEW YORK THURSDAY NIGHT.

The Carpathia, having on board the only survivors accounted for, is coming in slowly to New York. All hope for details of the tragedy and its effects are centered on this ship. She will be in wireless communication with Sable Island tonight with Nantucket on Thursday and she will reach New York some time Thursday night.

London, Paris and New York are grief stricken and overwhelmed by the news of the disaster. Tearful crowds of relatives and friends of passengers on board the Titanic thronged the steamship offices in all three cities, waiting hour after hour for news that more often than not, when it does come, means bereavement and sorrow. People in Paris and London went to bed last night in the belief that all the passengers on board the Titanic had been saved; this morning brought them the appalling truth.

Of the survivors on board the Carpathia by far the larger number are women and children.

MEN OF PROMINENCE MISSING.

Many men of great prominence on two continents are among the missing. No word has been received of Col. John Jacob Astor; his wife, however, has been saved. Alfred G. Vanderbilt was not on board the Titanic as at first reported; he is in London.

Isidor Straus, the New York millionaire merchant and philanthropist, who was on board, has not been reported among the survivors.

New York, April 16.—The news that the Titanic had sunk came in a brief wireless dispatch to Cape Race, N. F., shortly after 7 o'clock last night from the White Star liner Olympic, which reported that the Titanic had foundered at about 2:25 Monday morning in latitude 41:16 north and longitude 50:14 west. The message added that the steamship Carpathia, then on her way to Naples, had reached the scene of the wreck at daybreak and found only boats and wreckage and that all the Titanic's boats were accounted for and "about 675 souls saved, crew and passengers, latter nearly all women and children."

This news was confirmed shortly afterward by officials of the White Star line here, who announced that the Olympic had sent them a wireless dispatch that the Titanic had sunk.

Grave Fears for Rest.

A wireless dispatch received early today at Boston, which was relayed by the Olympic from the Carpathia, stated that the Carpathia had 806 of the Titanic's passengers on board, mostly women and children, concluding with the words: "Grave fears are felt for the safety of the balance of the passengers and the crew."

The wireless dispatch from Cape Race, N. F., telling of the sinking also gave the information that the steamship Californian was remaining and searching the vicinity of the disaster. That the Virginian may have some of the ship wrecked passengers of the Titanic on board was indicated in a telegram received here from St. Johns at 2:15 this morning, which stated that she would bring to St. Johns such survivors as she "may rescue." Inasmuch as the Virginian was bound for Liverpool she would hardly return to the New Foundland port unless for humanitarian reasons.

The air was biting cold and the chill that rose from the ice floes caused the passengers to hover close together to keep warm. All through the night the life boats bobbed helplessly between the shifting cakes of ice, while the survivors prayed for dawn to come.

Carried Hundreds to Death.

Daylight came and with it arrived the Cunarder Carpathia which found only the score of life boats filled with crew and passengers floating helplessly about the vicinity where the Titanic had passed under the waves.

The names of 201 first class and 116 second class passengers who had been saved from the Titanic, making a total of 317 names, have already been received. According to the last report from Captain Rostron, of the Carpathia, there are about 800 survivors of the Titanic on board, which would show that 483 persons had been saved whose names had not been sent in by wireless.

During the morning great throngs of people crowded lower Broadway in front of the White Star line offices, and police reserves were called to control the big crowd.

Of the 201 first class passengers thus far accounted for 132 are women, 63 men and six children. Of the 116 second cabin passengers reported survivi-

LOSS OF LIFE ON THE TITANIC AS SHOWN BY NEAR-BY COMPARISON.

A comprehensive idea of the terrible loss of life in the sinking of the Titanic may be gained from a comparison of figures with the population of nearby Indiana cities and towns.

If the entire population of New Haven were to be wiped out, the loss would number 196 fewer than the number which went down with the Titanic.

Titanic's death list is 21 more than the entire population of Albion; it exceeds the population of South Whitley by 58; it is greater than the population of Waterloo by 67.

If a cyclone should destroy every life in the town of Avilla and Ashley, the loss would not reach the Titanic's death roll by 16.

The Titanic's death list exceeds the number of inhabitants of Huntertown, Sheldon and Roanoke by 135.

EXPERTS SEEK TO ANALYZE CAUSE

Navigation Experts Discuss Sinking of Magnificent Titanic, Which Was Supposedly Unsinkable.

ICEBERGS SOURCE OF GRAVEST PERIL

New York, April 16.—Experts of navigation and ship building today attempted to analyze the causes of the sinking of the supposedly unsinkable Titanic on the basis of the meager information available. Lewis Nixon, the eminent naval architect, is inclined to think the Titanic was either traveling at full speed or perhaps crashed into a berg so tremendous that there was practically no give.

"If the Titanic hit one of those great ice masses," said Mr. Nixon, "it is likely that she struck one that had no more give than a rock. Under these circumstances something had to give way, and as the iceberg did not, the great ship had to crumple up. It is conceivable that an impact of this sort might have buckled her longitudeinal plates from end to end, shearing off and starting rivets and opening up the water tight compartments throughout the length of the vessel."

Naval Constructor's View.

Robert Stocker, naval constructor of the Brooklyn navy yard, said:

"In the case of the Titanic I am inclined to think that her sinking was due to the effect of grounding rather than to the impact of collision. Frequently a ship strikes what is known as a "pinnacle rock," ripping open her keel. The iceberg against which the Titanic smashed her bow may have had some such submerged propection which did additional damage to the keel. If the forward bulkheads of the vessel had held after the impact which smashed the bow, it certainly seems that the relative buoyancy of the remaining compartments would have been sufficient to keep the ship afloat. I am compelled to believe that a great many of her compartments must have been punctured or sprung a leak."

Render Ship Helpless.

"Under ordinary circumstances, watertight compartments will preserve a ship from sinking," said A. L. Hopkins, vice president of the Newport News Ship-

GRAHAM MAKES IT STILL STRONGER

A STIR IN CONGRESS

Washington, April 16.—For the purpose of making the flat charge that Mr. Mann, the minority leader, "knowingly" had uttered a deliberate falsehood in an effort to discredit him, Representative Graham, of Illinois, chairman of the house interior department expenditures committee, took the floor today and delivered a bitter assault on his colleague. The attack grew out of Mr. Mann's allegations of a few days ago that Chairman Graham had befriended and advised Mrs. Helen Pierce Clay, alleged by him to be a woman lobbyist active in Indian legislation.

An affidavit, which Mr. Mann had said proved his allegations, was read by Mr. Graham, who said it was neither proof nor even an affidavit as Mr. Mann had alleged.

Mr. Graham, shaking his clenched fist at Mr. Mann, declared that he was justified in the belief that Mr. Mann "was trying to get these charges before the country when he had knowledge that they were absolutely false."

Mr. Graham charged that Mr. Mann virtually had falsified the records in the case. While Mr. Mann was pilloried he sat grimly in his seat and deigned no interruption.

TAFT GETS DELAWARE

Chicago, April 16.—Col. Roosevelt arrived in Chicago at 8:55 o'clock this morning and prepared to leave an hour later for a tour of Nebraska and Kansas. A special train over the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad has been chartered for the western trip.

Dispatches criticising Col. Roosevelt and charging him with attempting "to disrupt the party" were shown him.

Col. Roosevelt smiled a big smile and said:

"I am feeling fine. I have nothing to say. Anything I have to say of political matters will be said in my speeches."

Police Are Withdrawn.

Acting under orders from Gov. Deneen Adjt. Gen. Frank Dickson today went to the Seventh regiment armory, the scene of yesterday's turbulent democratic county convention and demanded that the detail of 150 police be withdrawn and possession of the building restored to the state. His demand was obeyed by the police officer in command after he had talked over the telephone with County Judge Owens.

DELAWARE FAVORS TAFT.

Dover, Del., April 16.—The republican state convention in session here today elected the following six delegates to the national convention: United States Senators Henry A. DuPont and Harry A. Richardson; Gov. Simeon S. Pennewill, Edmund Mitchell, Dr. George W. Marshall and Ruby Vail. The delegation was not pledged, but favors President Taft whose administration was indorsed by the committee. Senator DuPont also was indorsed.

The annual banquet and business meeting of Purdue Alumni association of Fort Wayne will be held this evening at the Commercial club. The business meeting will be preceded by the feast, which begins at 7 o'clock. All Purdue men in the city, whether they are members or not, are cordially invited.

A new patient at the St. Joseph hospital today is J. Wiseman, of Cook avenue. He will undergo an operation for a tumor.

PLEAD FOR NEWS ALL THRO' NIGHT

Anxious Vigil to Learn the Fate of Friends and Relatives.

TAFT MAKING INQUIRY

New York, April 16.—All through the night the officers of the White Star line and the newspapers were besieged by scores of persons anxious to learn the fate of relatives or friends on board the Titanic, while a flood of telegrams, cablegrams and telephone messages were received, bringing eager inquiries from different parts of the country.

President Taft sent a number of dispatches to Halifax inquiring about the safety of Major Butt, his military aide, whose name does not appear in the list of survivors.

Wireless operators worked through the night trying to send and pick up calls from the scene of the disaster. The wireless was handicapped in the early morning by a thunderstorm, which finally silenced wireless transmission for a time.

Names Begin to Come.

Gradually the names of the rescued began to come through by wireless by way of Cape Race from the Carpathia, and were posted in the companys offices. There were some who scanned the lists and turned away with faces showing hopes realized, but the many who came were disappointed and grief stricken. A squad of police and an extra force of clerks were called to take care of the inquiries.

Vincent Astor, son of Col. John Jacob Astor, remained up through the night trying to learn the fate of his father. Word came that Mrs. John Jacob Astor, his stepmother, and her maid, were safe aboard the Carpathia.

Members of the Guggenheim and Straus families had representatives at the White Star offices throughout the night in anticipation of some definite word being received concerning Isador Straus and Benjamin Guggenheim, who were among the prominent passengers on the Titanic. These names were not in the survivors' lists received up to 8:30 o'clock. Numerous inquiries were received regarding the fate of Henry B. Harris, the theatrical manager and his wife. The list shows that Mrs.

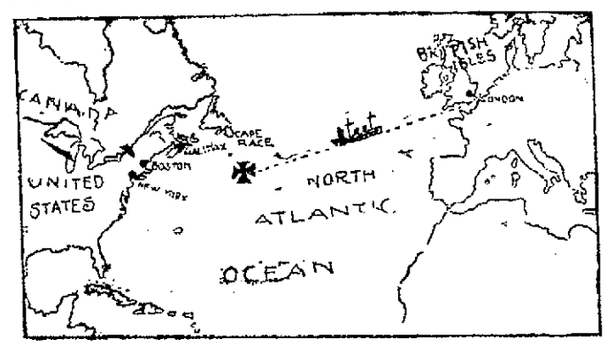
SKETCH SHOWING WHERE TITANIC WENT DOWN TO DISASTER.



Some of Those Who Escaped Death in Titanic Disaster

Cape Race, N. F., April 16.—The steamship Carpathia, which is believed to have on board all the survivors of the Titanic disaster, started early today to send by wireless to this station the list of the Titanic's survivors.

Great difficulty was experienced in getting many of the names correctly, and more than a score of names as made out here did not appear at all on the Titanic's original passenger list, but it is believed that many of these were passengers who had booked at the last minute.

The receipt of the list of the first cabin survivors required more than six hours' effort. So far as the names check up correctly the following saloon passengers of the Titanic are safe on board the Carpathia:

Anderson, Harry; Allen, Miss E. W.; Appleton, Mrs. E. W.; Astor, Mrs. John Jacob and maid.

Barkworth, A. H.; Baxter, Mrs. James; Brayton, George A.; Beckwith, Mr. and Mrs. R. T.; Behr, Karl H.; Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. D. H.; Blank, Henry; Bonnell, Miss Caroline; Bowen, Miss G. C.; Bowerman, Miss Elsie; Brown, Mrs. J. M.; Brown, Mrs. J. J.

Calderhead, E. P.; Cardell, Mrs. Churchill; Cardeza, Mrs. J. W.; Cardeza, Thomas; Carter, Miss Lucille; Carter, Mr. William E.; Carter, Master William; Case, Howard B.; Cavendish, Mrs. Turrell W. and maid; Chaffee, Mrs. H. F.; Chambers, Mr. and Mrs. N. C.; Cherry, Miss Gladys; Chevero, Paul; Crosby, Mrs. E. G.; Crosby, Miss.

Daniel, Robert W.; Davidson, Mrs. Thornton; Devilliers, Mrs. R.; Dick, Mr. and Mrs. A. A.; Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. Washington, and son; Douglas, Mrs. Fred C.; Douglas, Mrs. Walter.

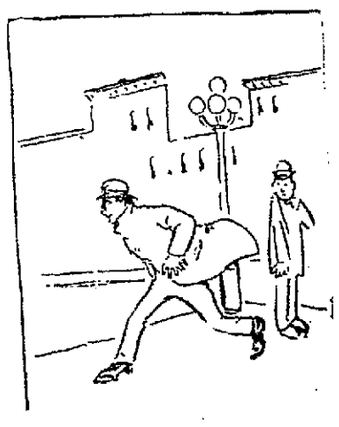
A Matter of Apparel



"I got out as quickly as possible."

"YOU could have knocked me over with a feather," asserted P. J. H. Myers, of the Nickel Plate offices. "Last Saturday night," he continued, "the Informal Dancing club held its final event at the Commercial club, and as we entered we were greeted by a number of friends who are also members of the club and we stood chatting as I removed my overcoat and proceeded to make the necessary preparations to enjoy the evening.

"Just then, I noticed some of them looking at me curiously, and what do you suppose! There I was, dressed in my tuxedo clothes, all but the coat, and in place of the coat I had on my smoking jacket. Yes, sir, my smoking jacket. Well, you ought to have heard them laugh. Well, my first impulse was to get out of sight somewhere and then to get home as quickly as I could and make the shift to the proper apparel, but before I did so I remembered that Dr. Sweringen, who lives not far away, could doubtless fit me out. So I hustled into my overcoat and got out as quickly as possible. Fortunately, I got what I wanted and was back without much delay.

"The thing happened in this way: When I was ready to leave the house I discovered I was a little too early, so in order to be comfortable until starting time, I slipped off my coat and substituted the smoking jacket. When the time came to leave, I forgot all about the jacket and hustled into my overcoat.

"And, do you know, that very little thing made the evening pleasant for everybody? Yes, the story had gotten nicely circulated before I got back."

Many Thrilling Experiences.

The brief wireless dispatches received so far show that the passengers and crew passed through thrilling experiences from the very moment that the monster Titanic crashed into the iceberg in the dead of night until the Carpathia, several hours later, reached the scene and rescued the survivors from lifeboats floating in a sea of ice. The collision occurred at a time when most of the passengers had retired or were about to go to bed. The shock of the collision sent many of the passengers to the decks partly dressed. A wireless dispatch came through Camperdown, N. S., saying that the passengers were ordered to the lifeboats at once, and that many were scantily clad as they took their places in the boats. This would indicate that the Titanic's condition was such that no time could be spared to return to staterooms for additional clothes.

Danger still confronted even those who were so fortunate as to be put aboard the lifeboats. Huge quantities of field ice covered the ocean, a wireless dispatch says, and in the darkness the crews had to guide their boats with the greatest care to prevent being jammed and overturned. The ice was so heavy that the lifeboats could not force their way through it and as a result the boats became widely separated.

Denies Holding Back News.

Vice President Franklin, of the International mercantile marine, said this afternoon that the company was holding back no information and that the steamship Olympic was now standing off Cape Race relaying the names of passengers on the Carpathia to the wireless station at Cape Race.

There was no further word this afternoon from the steamship Carpathia which had the 868 survivors of the Titanic on board.

Crowds in Broadway in front of the White Star offices blocked traffic for a time this afternoon and police reserves had to make a pathway.

The White Star company has received messages of sympathy from the German emperor and Prince Henry of Prussia.

DREADED TAKING TRIP.

Racine Woman Had Premonition of Death Before Sailing.

Racine, Wis., April 16.—"I dread taking thistrip to Denmark, for I have a feeling that I will never return alive. I just know thatthe boat will sink or something awful happen to me," said Mrs. Peter C. Hanson, numbered among the passengers onthe ill-fated liner iTtanic to her brother, Thomas Howard, of Racine. This she followed by a farewell kiss.

Mrs. Hanson, accompanied by her husband, sailed last February on a visit to his old home in Denmark. They were on their return voyage on the Titanic. Their names do not appear among the rescued.

COLUMBUS FOLK ABOARD.

Columbus, Ohio, April 16.—Three Columbus people, Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Beckwith and Mrs. Beckwith's daughter, Miss Helen Newsome, were passengers on the Titanic. Mr. and Mrs. Beckwith and Miss Newsome, who are rater as being very wealthy and prominent in society in this city, are reported as being rescued.

MEN WENT DOWN WITH SHIP.

Lifeboats Largely Filled With Women and Children.

St. Johns, N. F., April 16.—Messages from Cape Race seem to indicate that a very large majority of the men who were on the steamer Titanic went down with the ship and that the life boats were filled largely with women and children, but had sufficient members of the Titanic's crew to guide them. The belief was general here this forenoon that all who survived the wreck are aboard the Carpathia.

FIND NO LIFE RAFTS.

Parisian Steamed Through Ice Looking for Survivors.

Halifax, N. S., April 16.—The Parisian steamed through heavy field ice looking for passengers from the ill-fated Titanic. No life rafts or bodies were sighted among the floating wreckage, which covered a large area. The Parisian reported by wireless that the weather was cold and that even if any persons had been on the wreckage they would in all probability have perished from exposure before they could have been picked up. The Parisian is expected to reach here tomorrow morning.

DISTRESS IN ENGLAND.

Every Family in Southampton Has Lost Relative or Friend.

Southampton, Eng., April 16.—Distressing scenes have been witnessed throughout the morning at the White Star offices here, which have been thronged by the relatives of the crew of the Titanic. The town has been stunned by the news of the disaster, which is the greatest blow which Southampton has ever sustained. Every member of the crew had his home here and a large portion of them were natives of the town. There is no family inthe city or its vicinity that has not lost a relative or a friend.

MISSING MERCHANT WAS OLD FRIEND OF FORT WAYNE FAMILY.

The list of survivors of the Titanic disaster was scanned today with much anxiety by M. Frank, the well known Fort Wayne merchant, from the fact that Isidor Strauss, of New York, is listed among the missing.

"We have been close friends for many years," said Mr. Frank, "and the news that Mr. Strauss is probably lost comes to me like a personal sorrow."

CARPENTERS AND BUILDERS CLASH

STRIKE MAY COME

The local Carpenters union and the Master Builders' association are once more at swords point and according to W. O. Sullivan, of Indianapolis, general organizer of the carpenters, who is in the city directing the controversy, a strike will be declared unless the contractors sign up an agreement by May 1, asking for the employment of none but union men and for a minimum wage scale of 40 cents per hour.

The Master Builders' association, of which Paul Kinder is president, met Monday night and agreed to give the carpenters an increase in wages of 15 per cent. This was turned down by the committee representing the union.

"They want a closed shop," said James M. Henry, vice president of the builders' association. "Owing to the size of the town we turned the proposition down. Then we agreed to give the increase, which they in turn refused to accept. We withdrew our proposition last night and as a result the situation is still unsettled. We are willing to stand by an increase, but will not sign an agreement for a closed shop."

Will Hold Out.

Mr. Sullivan, representing the Carpenters' and Joiners' Brotherhood of America, local No. 232, states that the men will hold out until their proposition for a closed shop and a minimum wage scale of 40c is agreed to. A meeting for further consideration of the subject will be held Friday night.

"Our trade rules will go into effect May 1," said Mr. Sullivan. We ask only that a contractor withhold from employing non-union labor if he can do so. We also ask for one wage scale instead of the sliding scale which has been in effect so long here. Until May 1 we cannot tell what will be the outcome of the pending controversy, but I feel confident that we cannot agree with the builders under the proposition which they want us to sign.

"If a contractor employs a non-union man, and he is an efficient workman and will not go into the union, then we want to replace him with a union man. The builders will not agree to this."

Brewing Long Time.

The trouble between the carpenters and builders has been pending several months, but both factions remained quiet, hoping to reach a peaceable settlement. The union submitted its proposition to the builders' association April 1. The association agreed to increase wages but not to employ none but union men. This agreement was rejected by the carpenters and the matter rests unchanged today.

The union represents membership of nearly 300 carpenters out of a total of 600 in the city. The builders' association has a membership of about 60, representing the biggest companies in the city through which 90 per cent of labor is employed.

Developments of the Day as Told by the Bulletins

New York, April 16.—Two messages received shortly after 10 o'clock this morning by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph company from the company's stations at Cape Race and Sable Island, make it appear that there are none of the Titanic's passengers on either the steamship Parisian or Virginian.

One message reads: "The Marconi station at Sable Island has been in communication with the Parisian and the ship has no passengers from the Titanic."

The Allan line has issued the following statement:

We are in receipt of a Marconi, via Cape Race, from Captain Gambell, of the Virginian, stating that he arrived on the scene of the disaster too late to be of service and is proceeding on his voyage to Liverpool."

New York, April 16.—The 866 survivors of the ill-faetd Titanic who are now on board the steamship Carpathia steaming to this city are not expected to arrive before Friday morning. The Carpathia is a 13 knot liner and it was estimated today early it would take her from 75 to 78 hours to reach port.

Washington, April 16.—The Carpathia will arrive at New York Thursday afternoon, according to a wireless dispatch received by Collector Loeb. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Curtis has directed that the customs regulations be waived and that the landing of everybody be facilitated.

Montreal, April 16.—A wireless message received here says that Charles M. Hayes, president of the Grand Trunk railroad is among the survivors aboard the Carpathia. His wife and daughter already had been reported saved.

St. Johns, N. F., April 16.—All hope that any of the passengers or members of the crew of the Titanic other than those on the Carpathia are alive was abandoned this afternoon. All of the steamers which have been cruising in the vicinity of the disaster have continued on their voyages.

New York, April 16.—A wireless message sent by Captain Fostron, of the Carpathia, to the Cunard line here reads as follows:

"Am proceeding New York unless otherwise ordered with about 800. After having consulted with Mr. Ismay and considering circumstances with so much ice about, considered New York best. Large number icebergs and twenty miles field ice with bergs amongst."

Another message from Captain Rostron to the Cunard line said:

"Titanic struck iceberg, sunk Monday 3 a. m., 41.46 north latitude, 50.14 west longitude. Carpathia picked up many passengers in boats. Will wire further particulars later. Proceeding back to New York."

New York, April 16.—Captain Rostron, of the steamship Carpathia, sent a wireless message to Charles P. Sumner, general agent of the Cunard line here, this morning giving the information that the Carpathia with 800 survivors of the Titanic on board was proceeding slowly toward New York through a field of ice.

Montreal, April 16.—The weather signal station on the Gulf of St. Lawrence reports today that heavy fogs lay off Nova Scotia and that a violent thunderstorm broke in that neighborhood last night and is traveling eastward. It was said that such conditions left little hope for the rescue of any survivors of the Titanic that might still be adrift in rafts or boats.

New York, April 16.—The White Star line announced officially at 11 o'clock that they had received positive news that the number of survivors on board the liner Carpathia was 868. This dispatch was sent to the White Star line from the Olympic, which, it is understood, is in wireless communication with the Carpathia now proceeding to New York.

Halifax, N. S., April 16.—The Sable Island cableship Minia reported this afternoon through the wireless station here that she had sighted a great mass of wreckage but not boats or rafts from the Titanic.

This disposes of the hope that the Minia might have picked up some of the Titanic's passengers.

ADDITIONAL SOCIETY

A pleasant surprise in the way of a farewell party was given on Saturday evening in honor of John Hengsteler at his home at 2520 Gay street. The evening was spent playing games. MOOSE MINSTRELS CLOSE.

Another large audience last night attended the closing production of the minstrel show staged under the auspices of the local Lodge of Moose. The show has netted the lodge a handsome sum, which will be added to the treasury. Professor Gerber, who directed the members of the cast, will remain in Fort Wayne until after Wednesday night, to attend the banquet to be tendered the performers at the Alt Heidelberg. He will then go to Muncie, where he expects to stage a similar performance for the Moose lodge in that city.

LOCAL FORECAST.

Fort Wayne, Ind., April 16.—Fort Fort Wayne and vicinity: Fair and cooler tonight; Wednesday fair.

GENERAL FORECAST.

Washington, April 16.—For Indiana, Ohio and Lower Michigan: Cloudy and colder tonight; Wednesday fair.

Summary of Weather Conditions.

Since yesterday morning some showers have occurred from the lake region to New England, and some rains are reported from the southern states; over practically all other sections of the country fair weather has prevailed during the last twenty-four hours. An area of big pressure, accompanied by cooler weather, covers the Missouri valley this morning, and freezing temperatures are reported from much of Minnesota, the Dakotas, and the Rocky Mountain region.

The northwestern high pressure area will spread southeastward and will give fair weather in this section tonight and Wednesday with cooler weather tonight, but no freezing weather is indicated for this section.

MERE BABY GOES UNDER THE KNIFE

SWALLOWED BIG PIN

An operation Monday night at St. Joseph's hospital for the removal of a large safety pin from the stomach of the nine-month-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hewen, 91 326 West Superior street, establishes a record in the annals of local surgery this year, in point of age of the patient. The operating physician was Dr. A. H. Macbeth, who administer the anthestic and removed the object after it had been located by the aid of the X-ray.

The infant swallowed the pin, which was opened, Sunday morning while playing on the floor at the home of the parents. No outcry was made at the time, but later the child choked and then the pin passed down its throat, lodging at the entrance to the stomach. The X-ray examination was made Monday and the operation followed last night.

The little patient was removed at once to the home and is getting along as well as can be expected after such an ordeal. Dr. Macbeth states that all indications point to a speedy recovery.

THE DEATHS

STEPHAN.

Mrs. Ernest T. Stephan, aged 26 years, died Monday night at the family residence, 2723 Hoagland avenue, after five weeks' illness from double pneumonia. The husband is a well-known employe in the Pennsylvania companys local offices. Mrs. Stephan was born March 24, 1886, in Upper Sandusky, O. She waas a devout member of the Third Presbyterian church and enjoyed a wide circle of friends, to whom her death is a distinct loss. Besides her husband a daughter, Miss Ernestine, aged 5 years, survives.

The remains will be shipped Wednesday to Upper Sandusky, O., where funeral services and interment will be held.

Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning from the residence, Rev. E. W. Montgomery officiating. Later the remains will be shipped to Upper Sandusky, O., where services will be held from th Presbyterian church.

BAKER.

Mrs. Elizabeth Baker, wife of Hamilton Baker, a pioneer resident of Fort Wayne, died at 9:30 o'clock Monday night at St. Josephs hospital. Death was due to cancer for which she was to have been operated today. Mrs. Baker was 66 years of age.

Surviving she leaves the husband, two daughters and a son—Mrs. Sadie E. Cook, of Valparaiso; Mrs. Daniel Studler, of Fort Wayne, and H. J. Baker, of Armstrong Creek, Wis.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon from the residence, 1017 Herman street. Interment will be made at Lindenwood.

FUNERAL NOTICES.

Bever.—Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Bever Wednesday morning at 8:45 o'clock at the residence, 913 Hoffman street, and at 9 o'clock from the Precious Blood Catholic church. Interment will be made at the Catholic cemetery. Surviving Mrs. Bever are the following children—George and Louis Bever, of Fort Wayne; William Bever, of St. Louis; Mrs. Anna Crifer, of Toledo, and Mrs. D. Bletzacker, Mrs. C. H. Baird and Mrs. I. Heaney, of this city. The following brothers and sisters also survive—Mrs. William Clark, of Oklahoma; Mrs. Mary Cairns, of Pittsburg; Mrs. Charles Zehndner, of Fort Wayne and Joseph Brown, also of this city. Seventeen grandchildren and one great-grandchild survive.

Andrews.—Funeral services for M. E. Andrews Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the Getz & Cahill undertaking rooms. Ladies of the W. R. C. will hold flag services over the remains. Interment will be made at the I. U. O. F. cemetery at New Haven.

EXPEL STUDENTS AT HARTFORD CITY

School Authorities Inaugurate Vigorous War on Student Secret Fraternities.

Decatur, Ind., April 16.—The war on secret societies in the local high school reached a climax Monday when five students were expelled for disregarding the recent edict of the faculty prohibiting any member of the high school from affiliating with fraternities or sororities.

Other expulsions, it is said, are likely to follow an investigation now being made by the faculty to learn the identity of students who either Saturday or Sunday night gained entrance to the high school and departmental assemblies and stacked the books in a promiscuous heap.

Investigation disclosed that entrance was gained through a window opening onto a fire escape, it being presumed that the window was unlocked by one of the students implicated some time Saturday while the teachers' institute was in session. If the faculty is successful in learning who the students were they, too, will be expelled.

The exigency has arisen, the school authorities believe, when it is time for them to deal summarily with those students whose actions for the past several weeks have not only seriously interfered with the discipline of the school but has threatened it with absolute disruption.

SUIT TO BREAK WILL.

Editor Buchanan Seeks Legal Rights in Fathers Estate.

Auburn, Ind., April 16.—J. Edgar Buchanan, who is the editor and proprietor of the Auburn Daily Dispatch, has brought suit in the DeKalb circuit court to have the will of his father, the late Albert Buchanan, declared void for three different reasons, one of which is that the testator was of unsound mind at the time the will was executed and that undue influence was brought to bear on him in the execution of it.

The elder Buchanan died over a year ago. He was a large land owner and also had large personaly property interests. Editor Buchanan was his only child, a son by his first marriage. The first wife died some years ago and Albert Buchanan remarried. His second wife survived him and in his will he gave her his entire estate, cutting off his only child without a dollar.

The case will be tried at the June term of court. The plaintiffs attorneys are P. V. Hoffman and C. M. Brown, of Auburn, and James H. Rose, of Fort Wayne.

The second examination for the eighth grade pupils in the common schools outside of the city of Fort Wayne will be held next Saturday. It is expect that 150 will attend. Arrangements are being made for the Allen county eighth grade commencement which will be held at Princess rink.

SIXTEEN CHILDREN IN EGLEY FAMILY

Mother Gave Birth to Seventeen, But Death Claimed One Three Years Ago.

Decatur, Ind., April 16.—One of the largest families in this county is that of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Egley, who reside near Peterson. Seventeen children have been born to them and sixteen are now living, the last to arrive at their home being a baby boy born last Saturday. Of the sixteen living eight are boys and eight are girls. The dead child was a son. His death occured three years ago at the age of twelve years. Three of the children are married. All of the others live at home with the parents. Frank, the oldest of the family, is 27 years of age. The mother is 46 years old, a strong, healthy lady, being of German stock, whose tender care for her children makes the home happy, as told by all. But little sickness prevails in the Egley home all being healthy and strongly built.

NEW PASTOR AT DECATUR.

Rev. Ernst Fitch, of Angola, Called to Christian Church.

Decatur, Ind., April 16.—At the services on Sunday the congregation of the local Christian church voted to extend a call to the Rev. Ernst Fitch, of Angola, to accept the pastorate of the church here, succeeding the Rev. J. M. Dawson, who recently resigned after twenty months' successful service. The Rev. Fitch is a young minister of experience in the work, and a few weeks ago conducted trial services here. The church was well pleased with him and decided to ask him to become their permanent pastor.

VILLAGE RICH IN BLESSINGS.

Three More Arrive (Triplets) and Increase Hamlet's Share.

Columbus, Ohio, April 15.—Jersey is rich in Blessings. They are almost as numerous there as the beantitudes.

There are just one hundred souls in Jersey, which is a village five miles north of Pataskala. That is, there were one hundred until recently. Then three more new Blessings were conferred upon the community by Mother Blessings, who has rallied nicely from the effect of her task of adding 3 per cent. to the population of the village and increasing its Blessings 60 per cent.

Father Blessings, who is called George, is a stone mason and speaks lightly of his latest Blessings, which average only four and one-half pounds apiece. Before their advent he had three others, partially grown, so that with the newest ones, Jersey has one perfectly tangible and visible Blessing for every fifteen of its inhabitants.

The Little River ditch case, which has been pending a hearing for several weeks, will come before Judge Cook in the Huntington circuit court on Thursday, April 25.

ANTWERP NEWS.

Antwerp, Ohio, April 16.—Ab Dunderman, agent for the Wabash at this place, working nights, had the misfortune to get his hand between a truck and a moving train Sunday evening, mashing that member quite badly.

Frank Lamb was a Fort Wayne visitor Sunday.

Mrs. A. J. Schilb, Ed Berg and Hiram Overmyer were Fort Wayne visitors Sunday, where they spent most of the day with A. J. Schilb at Hope hospital.

Miss May Woodcox and Fae Pefley were Defiance visitors Saturday and were the guests of relatives.

James P. Mooney, now employed at the Heidelberg restaurant, Fort Wayne, took a run down to his old home town Sunday. The "judge" is looking fine, and the boys were all glad to hand him the "glad mit."

Grant Carr and wife went to Fort Wayne Saturday, where they will be the guests of their daughter for a short visit.

Burt Zeigler has leased the room one door north of J. L. Johnson's blacksmith shop, and will move his poultry and egg business to this location.

Miss Alta Fields has been engaged by the Argus to hustle news items for that paper.

Mr. and Mrs. Jessie H. Cummings were Payne visitors Sunday, the guests while there of Oliver Lothamer and family.

Louis Wannamacher, of Defiance, was an Antwerp visitor Monday.

Misses Elma and Lillie Culbertson are home from an extended visit with relatives in Illinois.

Mrs. W. H. Hertel, who was taken to St. Vincent hospital some days ago, has undergone an operation upon the throat and at last accounts she was improving rapidly.

James Chorpening left Monday for Columbus. He was accompanied by Master John Milton Zuber, who will return to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Zuber, after spending a great part of the winter here with Grandma and Grandpa Chorpening.

Pat McGuire and wife, of Hudson, Mich., were visiting here a few days the past week, called here by the untimely death of Jos. Smith, who was their son-in-law.

Herman Zuber, who lives at Toppenish, Wash., sends word home that his home has been gladdened by a bright bouncing baby boy, born March 28th.

ABOITE NEWS.

Aboit, Ind., April 16.—Rev. Charles Frakes and family moved to Louisville, Ky., last Tuesday, having resigned his charge owing to poor health.

Andy and George Bashart and Louis Shock have accepted positions with Joseph Sickafus on the Wabash section.

Owing to the illness of Rev. Arthur De Bond there were no services at the Christian church last Sabbath.

Fred Fahling is seriously ill at his home with lung fever.

Miss Nina Scott, of Roanoke, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Sickafus last Sunday.

Volly Mills left with a gang of men last Sunday for Lafayette, where they will commence repairing and make new fences along the Wabash road, having been appointed foreman in that department.

A. J. Stouffer is rejoicing over a brand new boy who came to his home one night last week.

Volly Mills has purchased the old Crance building and is remodeling it for a residence.

Members of Christian church turned out last Monday to clean up and beautify the church yard.

George Flagg and Arthur Raunners, of Fort Wayne, were guests of Harley Powell last Sunday.

Ed Tracy is the proud possessor of a brand new team and double rig.

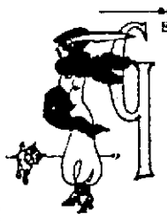
Mrs. Alida Lahman has been quite ill for several days.

Farmers are busy as bees at present trying to make up for the late spring.

Robt. Mills returned home after being on the jury at Fort Wayne for several days.

Pearl Zion, of Fort Wayne, has rented the Bowman homestead and will occupy it in a few days.

Men Who Helped to Make America



GENERAL ALEXANDER MACOMB, one of the fighters of the War of 1812, was the son of one of the associates of John Jacob Astor and Elias Kane in the fur trade.

His father was also Alexander Macomb, of Belfast, Ireland, who came to this country when a young man, and after his success in the fur trade settled in New York city and became a ship owner and a landed proprietor.

His tracts were situated in North Carolina, Kentucky and Georgia. In 1791 he purchased a big stretch of land on the St. Lawrence from the State of New York.

Alexander Macomb the younger was educated in the common school, and entered the United States army as a cornet of cavalry in 1799. In 1805 he had become a captain, and in 1808 he was a major.

MAJOR GENERAL A MACOMB

By the time the War of 1812 commenced he was lieutenant colonel of engineers and adjutant general of the army. He was made colonel of the Third Artillery, and in 1813 he won a reputation for gallant fighting at Niagara and Fort George.

It was in 1814 that he made his most brilliant record as a fighter. By that time he had risen to the rank of brigadier general and was placed in command of the northern frontier.

On September 11, 1814, at Plattsburg, he met the British forces, and although the odds were strongly against him, he defeated Sir George Provost and his men and drove them back into Canada.

Later he became an Indian fighter in the Seminole War in 1835, and wrote a number of works on military tactics and allied themes. He died in Washington, where he is buried, on June 25, 1841.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

RALPH HERZ

In "Doctor De Luxe" the Attraction Thursday Evening.

"Doctor De Luxe," the merriest musical frivolity, will be presented at the Majestic theater Thursday evening with a splendid cast and stage equipment. The first scene of the play is laid at a pet emporium, the second is the reception room and office of Dr. Melville, while the third is the summer garden of the Hotel Lennox.

"Doctor De Luxe" is a musical farce of an unusual kind as regards both manner and matter. It is an uncommonly good entertainment and the admirer of tuneful music, abundant fun-making and dashing strenuous stage movement will have nothing to regret if he patronizes the performance. The music is of the best and all know the wide-spread popularity that is enjoyed by catchy music of this variety. The cast is headed by Ralph Herz, whose reputation is too well known by his excellent work in musical comedies to need comment. Among the others of the cast are Taylor Williams, Harry Delf, Harry Stone, Edward Wade, Edward Earle, Rena Santos, Marion Ballon, Polly Prim, Sylvia De Frankie, Cordelia MacDonald, Arline Fredericks, Jane Hazelton and the wonderful boy tenor, Master Harry Hathway. The production is being sent enteur under the management of Jos. M. Gaites, who has given it a sumptuous scenic equipment. One of the features of the show is the "Skelton" chorus in which the girls wear queer sort of clothes that give them the look of a skeleton. This chorus is one of the most popular ones of the day for it is conceded so by every one who sees "Doctor De Luxe."

MARGARET ILLINGTON

In the Season's Most Successful Dramatic Hit, "Kindling."

In "Kindling," which comes to the Majestic theater on Friday evening, Margaret Illington again acts the role of a wife who steals. Yet the circumstances are somewhat different than the role she played in "The Thief." She is Maggie Schultz, the young wife of a stevedore, and it is her fierce mother-love for her child, yet unborn, that tempts her. She aids the son of a neighbor, a thief, to steal. As her share she gets a diamond brooch which she pawns for enough money to take her and her husband west, for she is obsessed with the idea that it would be worse than criminal to bring a child into the world in the crowded tenement in which they live. The play comes here with the endorsement of New York and Chicago, and Miss Illington is credited with having won the great triumph of her career.

"Kayser" THE GUARANTEE THAT GUARANTEES

No Occasion for Surprise.

This story is told of Forrest, the great tragedian:

Forrest was playing in "Richard III.," and the part of Catesby had to be taken by a low comedian, who sauntered on the stage at the wrong moment and uttered the famous words, "My lord, the duke of Buckingham is taken," in the wrong place.

Forrest clenched his fists in rage, but otherwise took no notice of the remark.

Later on the comedian repeated the words in the right place, and when the king expressed surprise at the news Catesby folded his arms, walked boldly down the stage, and remarked to the great actor in loud tones:

"I told you so before, Mr. Forrest, but you wouldn't believe me."

Putting Rival Presidential Candidates Out of the Running.

The more or less merry scramble between President Taft and Candidate Roosevelt for delegates to the republican national convention has now reached the stage where each selection of a new installment of delegates puts one of the other of these two estimable gentlemen out of the running according to the opinion of the particular one who chances to be the favorite in the immediate selection.

"Our avalanche victory in Pennsylvania spoke the final word and made the repudiation of the Taft candidacy complete," shrieks Senator Dixon from the Roosevelt headquarters in Washington. "The president is in the fight to stay and will be the nominee," retorts Congressman McKinley, generalissimo of the Taft cohorts. "He was nominated four years ago without the votes of Illinois, Pennsylvania, Indiana, New York or Wisconsin."

And there you are, as Mr. Dooley would philsophically observe. It is clearly evident that Senator Dixon is determined to make the most of his opportunity and do his crowning while the crowning is good. And that cheerful whistle of Congressman McKinley may be merely a subterfuge to keep courage up. It is hardly possible that either of these gentlemen expects the country at large to take him seriously at this stage of the proceedings. This is merely the period when claiming everything will do no harm and may possibly help some. Something like half the delegates to Chicago remain to be chosen, to say nothing of the thinning out that will come when the scores of contests are decided by that body.

When the high officials of the Moose come to Fort Wayne this week to look over the situation with a view of locating the proposed industrial school of that great fraternity near this city, they will not only see a mighty fine city, but one which will cordially welcome and encourage the tremendously important enterprise they are projecting.

President Taft is said to be firmly of the opinion that Champ Clark will be chosen as the democratic nominee for the presidency. It will be recalled, however, that Mr. Taft's opinion as to who is going to get presidential nominations is not given very high rank by a very considerable number of his former political friends.

"OBSERVING CITIZEN" OBSERVES.

Editor Sentinel: I would be very sorry indeed to see the proposed bond issue for purchase of river front fail in consummation.

What a great opportunity this is for the future welfare and beautification of our city and at how slight a cost to the individual tax payers. I, for one, am convinced that many of our people do not realize or appreciate the great and lasting benefits that we are sure to derive from improvements of this character or there would not be heard protests from such men as ex-Mayor Hosey for example. Our people generally do not realize that Fort Wayne is no longer an overgrown country town; that she has cast off her outer shell and must take rank with the larger cities of the middle west.

That aside from our business supremacy, that of being the best business town in the state, we are among the ugliest and non-progressive and are sure to be outranked by both Terre Haute and South Bend unless we make of our town a better city to live in.

We lay the flattering unction to our souls that we have no slum element, that all our people are employed and are home owners, etc., but I say that we will be like Cincinnati or New Orleans on a small scale (both back numbers for cities of their class) outstripped by our more progressive neighbors unless we keep up with the procession.

Look at Kansas City, there is an example of what a real live community may accomplish. With seemingly insurmountable barriers in the way of hills and gulches she has elevated her tracks so that fast trains gain 10 to 15 minutes over old schedules in coming in and going out of town; in addition to this she has laid out and constructed a magnificent system of parks and drives and with tax rate no higher than average cities of her class is growing rapidly and will continue to grow.

Shall we sit supinely, continuing to build our houses on the sidewalk so that we may have more room in the back yard for cabbage, paying a nigger 40 cents to haul our old cans to the nearest river bank and throwing at least half of our ashes in the alley, being content as we have been for the past 30 years with a growth of one thousand a year; or, shall we make the most of our present opportunity for the betterment and rapid growth of Fort Wayne? I will say not less than 40 per cent in the next decade if we are not asleep. Are we for "Fort Wayne With Might and Main" or shall we become denizens of Sleepy Hollow?

I am not ready to believe that such men, as the Fosters, Chas. Worden, B. B. Hanna, Perry Randall and other progressive spirits are seeking these improvements from purely selfish motives. I believe that such men as these really are for "Fort Wayne With Might and Main."

Yours very respectfully,
OBSERVING CITIZEN.

FROM A RAILROAD MAN.

Editor Sentinel: The citizens of Fort Wayne are demanding that the Pennsylvania railroad build a new depot which will cost in the neighborhood of $200,000. They are harping about it in the theaters, in the papers, and in the public gatherings and assemblages. They ask the railroad to donate this sum for the new depot for the people. Shouldn't the people be willing to do their share toward beautifying and fixing up Fort Wayne by giving an equal amount for the purchase and improvement of the river frontage on their three rivers? If a new $200,000 depot will help the city why won't a new $200,000 improvement for the rivers throughout the city be just as necessary? Besides the railroads have already expended great sums—in hundreds and thousands of dollars in track elevation. If one thing helps why won't the other?

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS DISCUSSED IN PRESS.

Competent Observers.

Baltimore Sun: "It has been frequently expressed as the opinion of competent observers that the Filipinos will not be fit for complete self-government for at least a generation."

"Largely Political."

Providence Journal: "The introduction of a bill for the qualified independence of the Philippines for a period of eight years and full independence thereafter is, of course, largely political."

Experience.

Philadelphia Times: "Experience in the islands has convinced many republicans as well as democrats that the taking of those islands was a great mistake."

Mental Ability.

Cleveland Leader: "It is difficult to conceive how a man with sufficient mental ability to win him the chairmanship of the congressional committee on insular affairs can consider that the Filipinos are anywhere near ready for self-government."

"Buncombe."

Washington Star: "Fortunately for ourselves, the Filipinos and the great powers of the world, matters in the archipelago have advanced to that state where buncombe has lost what little savor it may once have had."

"Dr. Monroe."

Los Angeles Times: "When the Filipinos acquire the habit of learning they will readily demonstrate themselves capable of self-government. Our country will then have another session with Dr. Monroe."

Awful Tragedy in Ice Fields of Atlantic Proves to Be World's Greatest Steamship Disaster.

NEWS COMES IN FRAGMENTARY WAY

These pinnacles of facts concerning the world's greatest steamship disaster—the sinking at 2:20 a. m. Monday of the great Titanic off the banks of Newfoundland stood out prominently early today as sifted from the wireless reports:

Revised estimate loss of life, 1,234 souls.

The $10,000,000 steamship, with cargo and jewels worth perhaps $10,000,000 more, total loss.

No mention among survivors of Col. John Jacob Astor His bride, nee Miss Force, of New York, has been saved. Major Archibald Butt, President Taft's aide, is still unaccounted for, as are many other persons of international importance. J. Bruce Ismay, president of the International mercantile marine owners of the White Star line is among the survivors, as is his wife. Wireless reports say the Cunarder Carpathia has on board 866 survivors, the total thus far accounted for. She is steaming for New York and should arrive on Friday. The rescued passengers drifted in life boats for many hours before succor came.

Of the foregoing summarized reports concerning the awful tragedy in the ice fields of the Atlantic two were fraught with hope as the day dawned. The first was that the rescue ship Carpathia carried nearly 900 survivors as against 675 reported to be on board yesterday. The second was the message saying the Virginian might have others on board whose safety would cut the list of dead.

Captain E. J. Smith, commander of the Titanic, probably went to his grave with his ill-fated vessel without once being able to communicate direct with the agents of his line. Aside from the C. D. Q. sent by his wireless operator, not one word from him was received up to the time the Titanic sank bow foremost into the ocean and the presumption is that he met death at his post as a gallant skipper should.

Unwritten Law of Sea.

That he and his crew enforced rigidly the unwritten law of the sea—women and children first—is plainly indicated by the preponderance of women among the partial list of survivors that the wireless has given. Although rated as one of the most able commanders since the advent of the modern steamship, Captain Smith's career had been recently marred with ill-luck. He was in command of the Titanic's sistership, Olympic, when that vessel was in collision with the British cruiser Hawke. Exonerated of all blame for this occurrence, he was placed in charge of the Titanic only to graze disaster when his new charge fouled the steamship New York in the Solent after leaving Southampton on his maiden voyage, which has ended so disastrously. He had been in the line's employ for more than thirty years, and his first important command was the Majestic.

Although 866 souls are reported to be on the Carpathia, it is apparent that all of them are not passengers, for it was necessary for members of the Titanics crew to man the lifeboats which set out from the sinking liner. How many of the crew were assigned to each boat is a matter of conjecture. A similarly unsettled matter is the percentage of first-class passengers among those saved, while the names of survivors obtained are largely those of saloon passengers, the rule of "women first" should apply equally to the second cabin and steerage, a regulation which may have cost the life of many prominent men above decks. It is natural also that the names of the more obscure survivors would be slower in reaching land.

False News and False Hopes.

False news and false hopes and an international belief that the palatial Titanic was practically unsinkable followed the slowly unfolding accounts of her loss in a way without precedent.

Eager crowds in a dozen cities in the United States besieged bulletin boards when it became known that the giant liner had really sunk with terrible loss of life and in New York city hysterical men and women crowded into the White Star line offices seeking news of relatives. Vincent Astor, Col. Astor's son, spent the entire night waiting for some wireless tidings of his father, alternately visiting the White Star line headquarters and the newspaper offices.

The speed at which the Titanic was traveling when she shattered herself against the iceberg will perhaps not be known until the first of her survivors reach port. Whatever her rate of progress, however, shipbuilders here and abroad must admit that while the modern steamship may defy wind and weather, ice and fog remain an every present element of danger. No ship, they point out, no matter how staunchly built, nor how many water tight bulkheads protect her, may plunge headlong against a wall of ice without grave results. The general opinion is that the Titanic's equipment was put to an extraordinary test which no vessel could have withstood.

For many years steamship men have asserted that the safest place to be is on a well equipped ocean liner. In proportion to the number of statistics showed there was less loss of life and less chance of injury on board a modern liner than there is in any other means of transportation. Fleets come and go from New York and other ports with the regularity of the tides and those carrying mails are made in a schedule which rivals that made by mailtrains.

There is no way to give warning in case of icebergs until too late. In a fog a pallid shape may be seen to be followed a half minute later by the crash of bows against the mass of ice.

In the lack of even a line from a survivor, imagination pauses before even trying to conjecture what passed as the inevitable breakdown and it was seen that of the more than 2,000 human lives with which she was freighted there could be hope of saving as it appears, far less than a half.

Other than the news last evening that 866 persons, largely women and children, had been rescued from the liner's boats by the Cunarder Carpathia, several hours passed without a word as to the fate of the remainder of those on board at the time of the fateful crash. Along the entire Atlantic coast wireless instruments were attuned to catch from any sources the slightest whisper of hope that possibly on some of the many steamships which rushed to the assistance of the stricken Titanic of the seas were other survivors of the sunken vessel.

No Encouragement Came.

But from none of the ships reported to be at or near the scene of what, viewed in the light of the probabilities may be recorded as the world's greatest marine horror, came the slightest syllable of encouragement to the anxiously waiting world.

Early last night there was hope that any moment might bring word of cheer. But anxiety deepened and many friends and relatives of those who sailed on the Titanic began to despair as hour after hour passed and the night grew old without word from either of the Allan liners, Parisian or Virginian, believed to be, with the exception of the Carpathia, the vessels nearest the Titanic's ocean burial place when she made her plunge.

The steamer Virginian was finally heard from at 2:15 o'clock this morning. She did not report the presence of any survivors on board, the message from her stating that she would bring to St. Johns, N. F., such survivors as she "may rescue." The fact that the Virginian was out of her course to put into St. Johns on her voyage to Liverpool was taken as a favorable indication, arousing hope that after all she might have picked up some of the victims of the wreck and was bringing them into port.

Buried Two Miles Deep.

The Titanic herself lies buried two miles beneath the ocean's surface, midway between Sable Island and Cape Race. Her position when she struck the iceberg was given as latitude 41.46 north, longtitude 50.14 west.

According to the Carpathia's advices the liner, which struck the iceberg at 10:25 o'clock Sunday night sank at 2:20 o'clock Monday morning, nearly four hours later and not more than half a degree south of the point where the collision occurred. It seems improbable from this that the liner, after the accident, made much headway under her own steam.

It seems established that there were about 2,170 persons on the liner. This was the estimate of the line officials in New York, who gave the number of passengers as 1,310, the remainder of 860 making up the crew.

SURELY TAKE "SYRUP OF FIGS" IF HEADACHY, BILIOUS, CONSTIPATED

Sweetens your stomach, clears your head and thoroughly cleanses your liver and 30 feet of bowels of sour bile, foul gases and clogged-up waste.

All those days when you feel miserable, headachy, bilious and dull are due to torpid liver and sluggish bowels. The days when your stomach is sour and full of gas, when you have indigestion; the nights when your nerves twitch and you are restless and can't sleep could be avoided with a teaspoonful of delicious Syrup of Figs. Isn't it foolish to be distressed when there is such a pleasant way to overcome it?

Give your inactive liver and ten yards of waste-clogged bowels a thorough cleansing this time. Put an end to constipation.

Take a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs tonight, sure, and just see for yourself by morning, how gently but thoroughly all the sour bile, undigested fermenting food and clogged up waste matter is moved on and out of your system—no nausea—no griping—no weakness.

You simply can't have your liver inactive and your thirty feet of bowels constipated with sour, decaying waste matter and feel well. The need of a laxative is a natural need, but with delicious Syrup of Figs you are not drugging yourself. Being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics it can not injure.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," refuse, with scorn, any of the so-called Fig Syrup imitations. They are meant to deceive you. Look on the label. The genuine, old reliable, bears the name, California Fig Syrup Company.

EARLY REPORT HAD PASSENGERS SAFE

News That Titanic Had Gone Down With Frightful Loss of Life Came as Appalling Shock.

New York, April 16.—Coming as it did after earlier dispatches had announced the safety of passengers, news which flashed over the wires last night from Cape Race, within 400 miles of which the liner had struck the iceberg, that the Titantic had gone down and that hundreds of lives were undoubtedly lost, was most appalling. It was at 2:20 o'clock Monday morning, three hours and fifty-five minutes after the Titanic had received her death blow from the mountain of ice that the greatest ship in the world went down.

The news came from the steamer Carpathia, relayed by the White Star liner Olympic and revealed that by the time the Carpathia, outward bound from New York and racing for the Titanic on a wireless call, reached the scene, the doomed vessel had sunk.

Left on the surface, however, were lifeboats from the Titanic, and in them, as appears from the meager reports received up to a late hour, were some 675 survivors of the disaster. These, according to the advices, the Carpathia picked up and is now on its way with them to New York.

Scene of Desolation.

For the rest the scene as the Carpathia came up was one of desolation. All that remained of the $10,000,000 floating palace, on which nearly 1,400 passengers had been voyaging luxuriously to this side of the Atlantic, were some bits of wreckage. The biggest ship in the world had gone down, snuffing out in its downward plunge, it appeared, hundreds of human lives.

While the fate of the majority of the 2,170 persons on board the mammoth White Star liner Titanic still remains in doubt and it is feared that more than 1,200 persons were lost, a note of good cheer came from the ocean ways by wireless between 1 and 2 o'clock this morning.

It was in the shape of a wireless message from the White Star liner Olympic, one of the vessels hovering near the scene of the disaster, flashing the news that 866 of the Titanic's passengers, mostly women and children, were being brought to port by the Cunarder Carpathia. Other messages later brought confirmatory tidings.

Reduces the List.

First reports were that the Carpathia had saved but 675 persons. The new figures reduced the list of those for whose fate fear was felt by nearly 200 and if, as seems probable, practically all these saved were passengers, it would appear that all but approximately 450 of the vessel's passengers are accounted for. A partial list of the survivors received from the Carpathia includes the names of many women of prominence who were on the steamer.

After the first desperate call on the Titanic for help had been sent flying through space and brought steamers for hundreds of miles around speeding to the scene, what seems to have been an impenetrable wall of silence was built up between her and the anxious world. The giant liner so far as last night's advices appear went to her fate without so much as a whisper of what must

FLORIDA MAN IN SHIREY'S PLACE

Rev. W. H. Chase is New Superintendent of Ft. Wayne District Anti-Saloon League.

BEGINS WORK IN MAY

Rev. W. H. Chase, a inister of the Baptist denomination, who for some time past has been the state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in Florida, has been appointed the superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League for the district of Fort Wayne, comprising the counties of northeastern Indiana. He takes the position made vacant by Rev. N. C. Shirey, who was recently transferred to Indianapolis as the assistant state superintendent and also superintendent of the Indianapolis district.

The transfer of Rev. Mr. Chase to the northern states was made at his own request. The north was his original residence and he preferred the work here in preference to that in the southern states. He will take up his work in this city about the first of May. The new superintendent is highly spoken of by his co-workers. He is efficient in every respect and will push the affairs of the league throughout the district. He takes the offices on East Berry street which Superintendent Shirey occupied.

ST. PAUL'S NEW BUILDING.

Plans for Combination School and Hall Nearly Ready.

Architect J. M. E. Reidel, who is preparing the plans for new combination school building and hall which the congregation of the St. Paul Lutheran church will erect on Barr street, opposite the church, the site of the present schools, now has them nearly completed and will submit them to the building committee within a week or so. At a meeting to be held next Sunday he will be able to give many general ideas. The cost of the structure will approximate $75,000. The plans provide for eight rooms, and three additional rooms for students in the commercial department. Six bowling alleys, billiard and pool rooms, toilet and bath rooms will be located in the basement. The auditorium on the top floor will be furnished with a stage and scenery and will have a seating capacity of nearly one thousand. On the same floor will be located the ladies' sewing room, also a dining room and kitchen.

IN CRUDE CRAFT LOCAL BOYS FLY

R. D. Lose, Earl Wagner and Martin Heingartner Manufacture Glider.

TO ORGANIZE CLUB

In the face of a strong wind Ralph D. Lose, aged 16 years, a son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Lose, of 213 Douglass avenue, made several successful flights with a biplane glider last Saturday. With the lad were two schoolmates, Earl Wagner and Martin Heingartner, who also glided several hundred feet through the air. The flights were the boys' initial efforts in the manipulation of air craft.

The Lose boy was the first to attempt a flight and was being towed across a field three miles south of the city when a sudden gust of wind lifted the crude machine fifty feet in the air. Without losing his nerve the lad remained with the machine and executed a beautiful glide of more than 200 feet. In making a short flight a side current of wind caused the machine to turn a complete somersault and dash to the earth. Lose was thrown under the wreckage but escaped uninjured. The machine was totally wrecked.

The glider manufactured by the boys is twenty feet in length and when in the air is towed by two strands of rope attached to each side of the plane. The boys have plans for a new type of aeroplane glider which they will make this summer. It is thought that if sufficient interest can be aroused among boys and young men of the city, a Glider club will be organized.

TEXTILE WORKERS TURN TIDE.

Bond Issue Lost in the Meeting Where Fifth Ward Was Heard.

In spite of a determined effort to get out the vote inthe Fifth ward at the hearing before the city council last night on the bond issue question the measure was defeated by a majority of four. There were 305 votes cast.

Major G. Will Wilson moved that no speeches be heard. The councilmen agreed to this, although James Reilley objected. The two were appointed tellers and Mr. Reilley refused to serve, but later when volunteers were called for he agreed on the ground that drafted soldiers were not much good, while volunteers were always fighters.

To the presence of a number of workers inthe Wayne Knitting mills is the loss of the ward attributed by the bond advocates. The textile workers adjourned their meeting early to go to the council chamber.

SOCIETY

Miss Alice Worden and her guests, Miss Gertrude Brown, of Indianapolis; Miss Helen Brown, of Germantown, O., and Miss Jewelle Stevenson, of Hamilton, O., together with intimate girlhood friends to make a dozen young women in all, were guests this afternoon of Mrs. E. T. Williams, Miss Worden's aunt. The most of the time was spent in making a book for the coming bride, of recipes, household hints and hints of how to manage a husband. There was a lot of fun as all had to speak from observation instead of from experience. Miss Worden will prize the book as one of the most entertaining remembrances of her girlhood days. At supper Mrs. Williams seated her guests at one table laid very beautifully in the colors of green and white. Carnations and ferns formed the floral decoration.

Miss Irma Hutzell, of West Berry street, entertained a small company of friends in honor of Miss Jeanette Muhler and J. Frank Kelker last evening. Pink sweetpeas were used in decorating the rooms and the appointments for the delicious supper. There were twenty guests who played bridge and enjoyed the evening. The wedding of Miss Muhler and Mr. Kelker will take place on Thursday morning.

Mrs. Edwin F. Condit and son, Cecil, of Chicago, and Gex Pullen Condit, of Gary, arrive in the city this evening. Mrs. Condit comes to attend the wedding of her son, Gex, to Miss Worden and Cecil Condit will be best man at the wedding.

The second annual ball of Mizpah temple was given last evening in Minuet hall and was not only well attended, but a very successful affair in every way. A large number of out of town Shriners were in attendance. Palms, colored electric lights, flags and festoons in color made the hall attractive and prettier than for any dancing affair of the season.

The Fortnightly club met last evening with Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Shoaff. Officers were elected for the ensuing year: Rev. E. W. Averill was chosen president; Lee J. Ninde, vice president; Arthur Parry, secretary and treasurer; Miss Margaret Smith, Dr. W. D. Calvin, Walter Moll and Fred B. Shoaff, executive committee. At the next meeting of the Fortnighrly to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. Paul Mossman an address will be given by Dr. Emerson, of Indianapolis.

Reaction from the Diminutive, High Crowned Hat, Milliners Introduce Graceful, Broad Brimmed Models for Summer Wear.

Paris prophesies a reaction from the diminutive, high crowned hat, and several milliners have brought out graceful broad brimmed models for summer wear. This hat or rose colored Milan is trimmed with white and is worn with a rose and black changeable taffeta suit, white collar and white buckskin buttoned boots.

Frills of all kinds are much the mode in Paris now, and these frills are useful little affairs to slip on over a rounded out bodice for the street. This frill is made of white net with a picot edge of blue. The hat is blue straw trimmed with white, and these white touches are repeated by white buckskin boots with high buttoned tops.

The gown shown in the centre is really very beautiful, lace being used lavishly in its making. A bow of black velvet with long streamers falls from the high waist line.

TRANSPARENT PETTICOAT.

Although wider skirts are reigning, with a prospect of even more expansion, the most fashionable petticoats are still the filmy ones of chiffon or lace. Some of these are really so pretty that it is a pity they are only seen in glimpses of an inch or so. A very pretty one is of apricot and silver brocaded gauze, with a flounce of very finely pleated cream colored web-like lace, whose hem is weighted by silver applique embroideries and touches of very narrow gathered apricot ribbon.

Another is in black chiffon, with wandering threads of gold interwoven, and the straight fulling flounce is embroidered in many shades of dull gold in a design of pomegranates and leaves. These are for short spells when the laundry question

Pretty underskirts, too, are made of soft washing silk. A charming specimen is edged with little kilted frills of fine lace, each caught at the side with a bow of colored ribbon.

THE CREPON CULT.

Crepon is more used than ever, and we shall see plenty of it when the warmer days come. Several gowns seen recently were made of singularly beautiful crepon, in which silver was interwoven very lightly, here and there, appearing in a definite pattern such as wheat ears in clusters or maidenhair fern.

The workaday form of the material is above all a blessing to girls and young women who spend much time visiting in Fried Rice.

Pick over and wash one-half of a cupful of rice, put in a double boiler with one pint of milk and one-half of a teaspoonful of salt. Stir once or twice as the rice begins to swell and cook slowly until all the liquid is absorbed. Turn into a buttered dish or bowl and set away until cold. Cut in half-inch slices, dust with flour and fry in butter or sweet drippings.

Little Caramel Puddings.

Into a clean, dry frying pan put one-half of a cupful of granulated sugar and set on the side of the fire where it will melt slowly. No water is to be added, and by the time the sugar is entirely melted the syrup should be of a clear, golden brown color. If the fire is too hot the syrup will be too dark and the burnt flavor too pronounced. Have ready some small cups of timbale molds. Pour a little of the caramel in each, turning them round and round in order to coat the sides and bottom as evenly as possible. The amount given should be sufficient for five or six small cups. In a bowl break four eggs, add four tablespoonfuls of sugar and beat enough to mix well. Add one pint of milk and one teaspoonful of vanilla and stir occasionally until the sugar is dissolved. Then fill the molds, set them in a pan of warm water and bake in a moderate oven until they are firm in the center. If baked too fast they will be full of bubbles. When done pass a knife around the sides and turn out in individual plates. The caramel, uniting with a portion of the water in the milk, serves to form the sauce. Serve cold.

TEMPLE THEATER THIS WEEK.

Another dandy bill at the Temple vaudeville entertained two large audiences yesterday and promises to keep up the lively pace for the rest of the week. Quite the funniest act and one of the richest things in burlesque is "Caesar C's Her," by the Leonard Anderson company. It is a travesty on Bernard Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," and while it does not provoke many loud laughs it is a delightful bit of burlesque. Imagine Mark Anthony with a lisp and effeminate voice posing as a dude! Or Julius Caesar getting his power from a power house! The act is really delicious. The Caits Brothers give beautiful examples of dancing. Their work is extremely classy and pleasing. Warren and Keefe, the comedian and the yodler have some moments of genuine pleasure. The comedy is clean and while it doesn't sound funny to tell that Warren can't pronounce some of his words, it is convulsing to the audience when he mumbles. The yodler has a sweet voice and the yodling is good. The pair sing "Everybody's Doing It" with as much spontaneity as if it were just out and the audience has difficulty to keep from joining in. De Lea and Orma, one of whom is "six feet of comedy," keep the audience in a roar of laughter. "Six feet" is a woman who looks ten feet in her ridiculous costumes and the two partners in fun making have a lively act. The two sensational acts of the bill are Eldora and company, who open the program with some fine exhibitions in heavy weight juggling mixed with very good comedy work. During the entire act not a work is spoken. The audience appreciated the skill and were generous with applause. The Great Davies family in their wonderful exhibits always bring something new and their work is always beautiful as well as wonderful. One of their sensational numbers is to have a woman bear the weight of three people on her shoulders, a four-story-high feat that is astonishing.

H. A. Keplinger, of the First National bank, is at Hoke today looking after business affairs.

A FIVE MINUTE CHAT WITH HOUSEKEEPERS.

Every housewife is glad to learn of ways to make the spring housecleaning easier, and the suggestions given below may help her during these trying days.

If it is not possible to send cretonne curtains to be cleaned, they should be treated as follows: Shake well in the open air. Have ready some lukewarm bran water, make a lather with soap jelly, wash quickly without rubbing, and rinse in bran water, adding one tablespoonful each of salt and vinegar to the rinsing water. Wring out well, roll up, dry quickly and iron on the wrong side with a heavy iron, as a polish is not required on the right side.

For the bran water, put half a pint of bran into a pan with two quarts of water, bring this to the boil and simmer slowly for ten minutes, watching it carefully, as it is apt to boil over. Strain through a fine strainer and add a quart of cold water. The same bran may be used for the three lots of water.

Of course, all the paint should be washed down, the varnished paint being treated somewhat differently from that which is unvarnished. In the first place, dust the paint thoroughly, then dissolve two tablespoonfuls of powdered borax in a little boiling water and add to this sufficient cold water to bring the total amount used to three pints. Sponge the paint well with this, then rinse with tepid water, dry and rub up with a soft clean cloth. When thoroughly dry rub up with a little furniture polish.

For unvarnished paint the borax should be dissolved as above, then diluted with lukewarm water, a little soap jelly being added to the water, and apply as before, rinsing it with lukewarm water and only washing a little at a time and drying it as you go along. Another very good method of cleaning white paint or enamel is to mix some fine whiting to a cream with water and apply this lightly, rinsing it off with clean water and drying it with clean soft cloth. Soap jelly is very simple to make and is most useful. Shred down any odds and ends of soap you may have with a knife specially kept for this purpose. Put the soap into a pan with just sufficient hot or cold water to cover it, and melt it very slowly over the fire till clear and absolutely smooth. This will keep for several days. Be careful not to overfill the pan when preparing this jelly, as the contents are very apt to boil over.

Mirrors should be well dusted and the frames wiped with a clean cloth, the glass being rubbed up with a pad of soft newspaper. If the glass is smeared and has been neglected, moisten a rag with methylated spirits. Dip this in fine precipitated whiting, and rub the glass well over with this, being careful not to let it touch the frame or come between the lacquering and the glass, as it is then difficult to remove. Dry with a duster, and polish with a chamois leather. Fly marks can be removed by dusting the spots with fine powdered blue tied up in a soft piece of muslin, and then rub up with an old silk handkerchief.

If polished furniture has been dented or bruised, soak the damaged part with warm water, then double a piece of brown paper five or six times, saturate this also with warm water, and lay it over the bruise; then lightly pass a hot iron over it, till the moisture has almost evaporated. This may require to be repeated. In very bad cases soak the bruise well with warm water and hold an iron directly over, but not actually touching it, keeping the spot well damped for some minutes without lifting the iron.

MAKING OVER THE STRIKERS CHILD

Little Ones Will Have Stories to Tell on Return from New York.

NO MORE WAN FACES

New York, April 16.—When "the war" is over and industrial peace settles over Lawrence, Mass., and 211 little children, who have been brought to New York from the strike-wrecked homes of the textile workers are sent back they will go home in better condition than they came. The little folks, many of them strikers themselves, who came here poorly clad, their pinched, wan faces showing the rigors of mill life, are experiencing just now something of what the socialist enthusiasts claim would be the condition of childhood under the communistic state. They are the petted darlings of the community. From the moment that they left their parents' homes in Massachusetts they have been watched over, cared for, examined, prescribed for, and catered to in a manner that their wildest dreams of luxury never could have fabricated.

They came to New York in special cars in the charge of committees who looked out for their welfare. They were received by crowds of sympathizers, who had brass bands to cheer them and red flags to lead the way to the halls where they were to be fed and examined as to health and then distributed among reliable families. There were warm kisses for the smaller children, hugs from motherly women and fatherly men for the older ones. There was no room for home-sickness in their troubled little hearts.

Their Life Here.

As soon as the children arrived here they were examined by Italian doctors, who directed what medicinal attention should be bestowed in each case. These doctors followed the children to the homes to which they were sent and looked after them day by day. Some of them were suffering from malnutrition. These were given special diets. A committee visits the homes every week to see that they are contented and happy.

Many of the children who had worked in the poorly lighted factories had eye troubles. An oculist examines them and prescribes glasses where necessary, and the New York committee of the Lawrence strike is seeing to it that glasses are furnished. A woman dentist in Brooklyn offered to look after the teeth of the children, and one by one they are being set right dentally. New clothing is being bought for them, and each child will go back home with a "bundle." All over the city the children are in school wherever possible, and are living exactly as the ordinary New York children in the homes of the better class working people.

Though the strike at Lawrence is being conducted by the Industrial Workers of the World, an organization that is opposed to the methods of the American Federation of Labor, it was not through them that the children were brought to New York. The credit for it belongs to the Federazione Socialista Italiana, of No. 157 East Twenty-eighth street. The plan has worked successfully in Europe and in the west.

Shrewd Observers.

The children who were brought here were much like the sixteen who went to Washington from Lawrence to tell their stories before the house rules committee. Red-cheeked, bright-eyed, alert little fellows, a trifle undersized, perhaps, because of racial characteristics, but strong and healthy looking, these little boys and girls acted from start to finish more like men and women than like children averaging fourteen and a half years of age off on what to the ordinary child would have been a pleasure jaunt. They told their stories straightforwardly and, having finished them, saw a little of Washington and came back to New York anxious only to get home again.

"The most interesting thing I saw about Washington," said little Carmela Tegli, aged fourteen and a half, as she sat in the parlor of the Abingdon hotel, where the children were housed in this city for two days on their way home, "was the colored section. We walked for a mile through a section where there were no white people living. I wonder what this great population of colored population will mean to the working people of future generations. Did I go through the capitol and see the white house? Oh, yes; but those places are not so interesting. They are simply great buildings where laws are made and the government is carried on. Laws could be made as well in a hall or any other building. Fine buildings and great machinery of government are ordinary. There is nothing ordinary in the great stretches of streets occupied by a race of working people. The possibilities of the working people are so much greater—greater in the way that they make things happen sometimes, I mean.

"I have had considerable experience since I went to work. You see, I was in school, and there came a man to our house who said to my father: 'Why don't you put that big girl to work?'

"'I don't know whether she is fourteen years old yet,' said my father. 'She was born in Italy, and I have forgotten whether she is fourteen or thirteen.' The man said that for $4 he would send to Italy and find out when I was born and get me working papers. Well, in a people will mean [illegible] papers and I was sent to work. They said I was fourteen and more. I hadn't been working very many days when my hair was caught in a spinning machine and my scalp ripped off. I have enough hair left to partly cover the big white wound, as you see. But I am going to have a wig some day. Well, do you know, when that happened they came and arrested my father for putting me to work before I was fourteen. But after he had been in jail for a time it was proved that I was fourteen, and he was let out."

St. Peter and the Scab.

While these children were being taken about the city as guests of the World they were well behaved, serious and quiet, though once in Bronx park they broke out singing:

St. Peter stood guard at the golden gate,
With solemn mein and air sedate,
When up at the top of the golden stair
A shrouded figure ascended there,
Applied for admission. He came and stood
Before St. Peter, so great and good,
In hope the City of Peace to win,
And asked St. Peter to let him in.
St. Peter said, with a gleam in his eye:
"Who is 'tending this gate, say you or I?
I've heard of you and your gift of gab:
You are what is known on earth as a scab."
Thereupon he arose in his stature tall
And pressed a button upon the wall.
And said to the imp who answered the bell:
"Escort this fellow around to hell."

This was immensely amusing to them and they began telling stories about the strike scenes in Lawrence.

Sammy's Experience.

Sammy Goldberg, who made the best speech before the congressional committee, said:

"Gee! It's tough in Lawrence these days! I was walking along the street t'other day when a soldier comes up to me and sticks his bayonet an inch from my heart and says 'Halt!' I halts, of course, because if I didn't I would have walked into that knife sticking at my breastplate. Then the soldier blows a whistle and up runs a policeman and searches me for weapons and dynamite. They are even taking the pocketknives away from us kids down there. Then the soldier, not finding anything on me, tells me to walk, and walk fast. If you don't walk fast in Lawrence you get poked in the back. [illegible] you before they search you either. They just hold any one up and go through them for weapons. It is disgraceful in a free country like America. And some folks in Washington wondered why we didn't get excited and patriotic over the big buildings there and the fine sights. We could see through those buildings right down to Lawrence, Mass., with soldiers poking children and telling 'em to walk faster. They have got your subway 'Step lively, please,' beaten a mile."

"I was on the street when the woman was shot in Lawrence," said Charlie Wasilesky. "It was all too horrible to tell over. But it was not the strikers that shot her; you may be sure of that."

William Murphy, the only Irish lad in the committee of strikers, told the story of the first fighting between the police and the strikers and also of the beating of the women at the railway station when the police stopped the children from going away from Lawrence.

"I was ashamed that so many of the police of Lawrence were Irish," he said.

One youngster, who objected to giving his name because, as he said, none of the children who went to Washington to tell their stories before the congressional committee could ever hope to get work again in Lawrence, comforted himself by saying he was hopeful that he wouldnt be allowed to work again because he wanted to go to school. All the children agreed with him that it would be a good thing if they did lose their jobs when the strike is settled, because then they could go to school.

"Our Ancestors."

In the party of little folks who went to Washington were two French children, two Polish, one Irish, one German, three Italians, two Jews, and two real Lithuanians. All spoke good English and all had been to school in Massachusetts, and had studied American history. They looked, talked and acted like the ordinary young New England boys and girls of the old Yankee stock in the cities. So great is the leaven of Americanism when it gets to work upon the children of the second generation. They talked at times about how "The Pilgrim Fathers laid the foundations of freedom and good government," and in moments of forgetfulness even said that "our ancestors fought at Bunker Hill."

"And why shouldn't they? The men who fought at Bunker Hill were kicking against the pricks of a system that was fraught with injustice, just as these children are," said Mrs. John Sloan of the New York Lawrence committee. "And these children are the future men and women of America. The Pilgrim Fathers and the rest of the fathers were the political ancestors of these children."

This Will Stop Your Cough in a Hurry

Save $2 by Making This Cough Syrup at Home

This recipe makes a pint of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer the most obstinate cough—stops even whooping cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or there hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative, too, which is helpful. A handy remedy for hoarseness, croup, bronchitis, asthma and all throat and lung troubles.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the ntural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe has attained great popularity throughout the United States and Canada. It has often been imitated, though never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you.

Man With Sore Feet Spends $700.00 on Them—A True Story.

"Here is one of the greatest testimonials I have ever heard.

"George Umoltis, from Atlantic No. 2, a coal plant near here bought two packages of EZO, and in about three or four weeks he came in and told me that he wanted to have it advertised, and said I am willing to pay all charges, because I want the people to know how good it is. He told me that for 7 years he hadn't stood on his feet, he spent $700.00 for doctor bills, and he only used one package of EZO, and can run and jump like a boy. He was all smiles about EZO."

Meyer Bros. Co., Four Drug Stores, sells EZO, a refined ointment for sore, aching, weary feet for 25c a jar.

ONE NEW PLAYER IS HOLDING OUT

Ed Smith May Start Season Without New Face on His Roster.

MEN ARE SELECTED

Notre Dame, Ind., April 16.—Thomas, an outfield recruit and a promising young outfielder, is still holding out in the trial spurt to make the Grand Rapids team and, unless he succeeds in landing a berth Manager Ed Smith will start the season without a new face in his baseball party.

The same old pitching staff will be used and he has a great deal of confidence in it. Weeks, a recruit, is still being retained on the catching squad, but Holmes and Scanlon are looked upon as the probable backstops and the list given out is as follows:

Pitchers—Smith, Essick, Meyers, Martin and Lindsey.
Catchers—Scanlon, Holmes and Weeks.
First Base—Schmick.
Second Base—Koehler.
Third Base—Barkwell.
Shortstop—Parker or Hadley.
Outfielders—Kroy, Lejeune, Craven or Thomas.

The real battle centers around shortstop. Both Hadley and Parker are playing in good form. Smith is watching their work with the eye of an eagle. Parker's fielding and throwing are above the ordinary. Hadley, however, is playing the game of his life. By reason of his experience in the league he looms up as the probable winner of the berth. In the event of Hadley landing the job, Parker will in all probability be retained. The youngster is an all around ball player, playing any of the infield jobs with the exception of first base.

He certainly must have had a good workout before appearing at Notre Dame. Against the collegians he proved an enigma. Perfect control combined with a nice change of pace and a variety of benders will certainly be a big factor in the big pitcher's favor and he has these things even at this stage of the season.

Manager Smith says he is in better condition now than he was in the year he so materially helped to win the pennant for South Bend, when he won twenty-two games. Beginning with January, the manager has had the benefit of the Notre Dame gym and consequently is in the best of trim. Dave Martin is displaying all that was expected of him. Speed is the strong forte of the tall twirler. Martin says that all he wants is the control. If he can locate the plate now he believes the other things will come later.

If Pat Lindsay does not show real class in the Central this year the wires have crossed. Although in camp only a few days Pat is the most aggressive player on the field. Lindsay is certainly there with the goods and the spirit of work displayed by the port wheeler is one of the gratifying aspects of the Black Stockings' workout up to date.

Big John Meyers is working very faithfully. Like Essick, Myers is in the best of condition. He has been throwing everything he has up his sleeve for the past few days.

TANNEHILL AND PROTEGE IN,

Left Handed Phenom Reports to the South Bend Club.

South Bend, Ind., April 16.—The highly touted southpaw, "Chick" Smith and the veteran twirler of the Southern league, Jesse Tannehill, brother of the Sox short fielder and local resident, arrived here today and reported at Springbrook park for the initial practice. Both are in fine condition after nearly a month of training at Dayton, Ky., where they reside. Tannehill signed Smith for Arndt and in signing him thinks that the local club has one of the best twirlers running loose in the independent circles.

VARNELL GOT HIS MONEY.

Kalamazoo Team Pays Him for Purchase of Catcher Nagleisen.

Owner Claude H. Varnell, of the Fort Wayne club, today received a check in payment of the sale price of Catcher Nagleisen, loaned last season to the Kalamazoo club and sold to Cleveland.

The case was decided five months ago in his favor and he has since been endeavoring to collect the cash, but until he got the national commission after the club owners he failed to get any satisfaction. Nagleisen has been turned over to the Toledo club.

THREE PLAYERS IN CAMP.

Erie, Pa., April 16.—Reis, Baker and Scott, purchased by the Erie club from the St. Louis Nationals, reported to Manager Gilbert yesterday. The arrival of this trio, the first two of whom are pitchers, and the latter a third baseman, increases the squad to nineteen. Gilhooley, the fourth player figuring in the deal, will reach the city today or tomorrow at the latest.

THEY'RE SURELY NEEDED.

(South Bend Tribune.)

That a several years' lease on the baseball section of Springbrook park has been secured by the South Bend Baseball association was announced today. The association will conduct the ball ground activities without interference or assistance from outside sources. Extensive repairs are under way.

PRYSOCK AT FIRST.

Ed Rogers did not land the first base job at Zanesville. "Red" Prysock is playing the bag and Jack Pendry is leading off the batting list in the exhibition games.

OPTIMISM STIRS PRESIDENT YOST

Says Canton Has the Best Team That It Ever Had in Its History.

EXPECTS TO FIGHT

Canton, O., April 16.—President L. P. D. Yost of the Canton team, says: "One of the strongest teams in the Central league and the strongest that has ever represented Canton in professional ball."

This outburst followed an inspection of Manager Gremminger and his squad at work and then came the annual attack of optimism as set out in the following statement:

"I've good reasons to say that the club will be up there in the race, barring accidents. Take that outfield. Nothing better that I can see and not many that can measure up to it. Cy Coulter, Jack Byrnes, Billy Murphy, Cy Dawson and Dang are all showing splendid form. The big job will be to pick three out of that bunch to stay for the season. More than three will be carried as long as the rules of the league allow.

"Byrnes and Coulter are almost sure .300 hitters, judging from the way they have been clouting the ball. Either Cy Dawson, Dang or Murphy can hand in close to .285 if they keep up their gait, and either of the first two may go over .300. A fast outfield that can hit close to .300 is good enough for any minor league club.

"Then look at the infield. Easily 100 per cent stronger than last season. Gremminger is sure at first and there will be few of them better in any way except on the bases. Harley Humphreys can play second sack right and is hitting the ball on the nose all the time. At short and third is where the big improvement will be made.

"With Lallier almost a certainty at third base or short. King can be switched around or retained as a pitcher and utility infielder. McGinty is playing better ball than last season and gives promise of hitting as he did in 1909 with Alliance. Then the Cardinals wanted to get him but failed. If he can get back to his old form, there will be no doubt about short. Mazer, too, may come around.

"Back of the bat the team has one of the best minor league catchers in the game in Texter. The figures will say that and they don't lie in baseball. Barnard, the Cleveland magnate, declared him the best young catcher he had seen while he was in New Orleans. With Sample or Johnson for second man, there is cause to smile when considering the catchers.

"The only department that may be weak is the pitching, and so far that looks good. Donley and O'Connell are sure to be as good as last year and ought to be better. Brittsen will be back about July 1 with his old left arm and baseball head. He won't need to win every game this year as he did last. Gotshall comes in a month and Dye is better than he ever was. If we should need pitchers, Grem can always get plenty.

"That's just what I think of the team. The only trouble is that we will have to let go of some good men to get under the limit."

Lallier will be here to join the squad this week. He has agreed to play and will leave his home in Waterbury, Conn., during the next few days. Transportation has been sent him.

South Bend, Ind., April 16.—The C. A. C.'s of South Bend, last night won third place in the five men events, standing with a mark of 2,659 pins. Four rolling marked the day's events, the only other change in the standing being made by Fred Gelb, of Hammond, who won fourth place in the individuals with 600.

FIRST PLAYER TO EARN REGULAR JOB ON FORT WAYNE TEAM FOR SEASON OF 1912.

LAVERNE FABRIQUE.

This is the first new player who has earned a regular berth on the Fort Wayne team of 1912 and he will play at short in the place vacated by the advance of Eddie Justice.

Laverne Fabrique is a name that either Bertha Clay or the Countess would fairly have reveled in if it had ever occurred to them, but neither had anything to do with it and it is a real bona fide name and was conferred on the bearer at Clinton, Mich., which is his home.

Out of the wilds of Michigan came a story during the winter months that this young shortstop had royal blood in his veins and that he is by direct descent a marquise (pronounced markees) or something like that, but it isn't bothering him much and the public ought not to worrk about it.

His principal aim in life is to rise in the grand old national game of baseball and if determination and grit will help him along any he will get there. He started his professional career in 1908 with the Jackson team, of the Southern Michigan league, where Walter "Bo" Slear, former illustrious citizen of Fort Wayne, game him his first lessons in the game. He stayed there three years before he got a chance to go up.

The principal reason for this is that he couldn't hit the ball hard enough. One day he picked up a paper with a story about some player who couldn't hit a barn door with a grain scoop but who hit in good style when he switched from the left to the right hand side of the plate.

Being of an experimental turn of mind the young shortstop shifted and he hit so well that Claude Varnell was persuaded to draft him and here he is. He is single and has both youth and beauty to recommend him to fair fandom. If he has a girl up around Clinton he hasn't mentioned it since he struck the camp.

THREE RECRUITS CUT FROM SQUAD

Gallino Sent to Ottawa and Carson and Collingwood Go.

PITCHER LOOKS FINE

Three recruits were separated from the local training squad today by a little pruning indulged in by Manager "Shag" Shaughnessy and with another cut or two the club will be down to the number with which it will start the season.

Hugh Gallino, pitcher recommended by Dr. James Casey, former manager of the local team, will go to the Ottawa club of the Canadian league, under a dicker made here today with Louis Cook, manager, who is in the city looking for talent.

Clark Carson never seriously expected to make the club and the manager didn't believe he was up to Central league standard when he reported, but he wanted a chance and it was given him. He has never been considered for a position, but the manager looked him over carefully and decided he would do for the Michigan State league and he will try to get him and Collingwood berths in the organization.

Pitcher Gets Good Start.

Frank Kubat, University of Illinois pitcher recommended by Carl Vandagrift, looked pretty good yesterday afternoon and this morning when he was given his first tryout.

He is a left-hander, big enough for pitching material and he handles himself as though he had had some pretty good coaching. He was warned not to let loose of anything but straight balls yesterday and the same caution was issued this morning.

As soon as he warms up to a point where he can place his pitching repertoire on display he will be given a good trial and if he has anything he will be given opportunity to land a berth with the local club. He was never on the varsity club. In 1910 he played with the freshmen at the university and last year he got more baseball in his head that was consistent with good class work and was declared ineligible.

There will be no game with the Shamrocks on Saturday afternoon and the first peek at the Fort Wayne team of 1912 will be had on Sunday afternoon, when it will line up against Mart Cleary and his prospects.

It was decided that better practice can be obtained Saturday by splitting the squad in two and indulging in base running, bunting and hitting, as the club has had no real work on the diamond and it needs the drilling that the manager has in store for his men.

While it had been fully decided to get on the diamond yesterday the manager had not counted on opposition from Jack Raidy. Jack wanted to give the infield a few parting pats before turning it over to the practice squad and he was accommodated.

COBB PEEVED OR SICK.

Georgian Left Them at Chicago and Went to Detroit.

Chicago, Ill., April 16. Ty Cobb, outfielder for the Detroit Americans, left his team here and departed for Detroit last night. One report said he was angry because his slumbers were disturbed by trains passing near his window early yesterday and another was that he is suffering from a severe cold. Manager Jennings affirmed the cold story and added that he thought the player might as well be home until he is in better condition. Cobb did not play today.

FROM THE BOX SCORE RECORDS

Dal Gainer was there in the game against the White Sox. He got two hits for three bases and scored two runs.

Frank Baker kicked into the Philadelphia-Boston game with a double that helped a whole lot.

Bert Shotten picked off three singles but could not prevent Cleveland from beating the Browns.

Toledo had a bit of bad luck in the game against Kansas City when Outfielder Hauger broke his leg sliding home.

McCarthy misjudged two outfield balls for Jimmy Burke's Indians and the club was beaten by Minneapolis.

McBride did a Ty Cobb run on the bases for Washington and scored the only run in the game with the Highlanders.

Johnny Kling's Boston team treated Mathewson just like he was a busher yesterday and beat the Giants.

GOING TO SEE PACKEY.

Chicago Fans Want to See Him Meet Mat Wells.

Chicago, Ill., April 16.—Local boxing followers are planning an invasion of New York to witness the international bout between Packey McFarland and Matt Wells. Not since the proposed Wolgast-McFarland affair billed for Milwaukee, and only billed, has there been so much interest in any one contest as is being shown in the coming argument in New York. The fans in Chicago even are considering the go in the light of a championship affair.

The south side opponent of the Englisher has started work for the battle, doing several miles on the road yesterday morning and strengthening his lungs voiling for the Sox in the afternoon. Packey intends to start boxing today at Nate Lewis' new gymnasium on Madison street. The local boxer realizes that Wells is a tough customer and will prepare for every emergency.

REVENGE FOR THREE LOSSES.

Blank Notre Dame, 6 to 0, After Trio of Defeats from Collegians.

Notre Dame, Ind., April 16.—After winning three successive games against Grand Rapids Central league team, Notre Dame was humbled by the leaguers, 6 to 0. The college men put up a miserable exhibition, especially padding the error column. The game was called at the end of the seventh. Scores:

	R.	H.	E.
Grand Rapids	6	8	1
Notre Dame	0	1	6

Batteries—Essick, Lindsay and Weeks; Berger, Wells, Guppey and Gray.

ONE MAN HOLDING OUT.

Dayton, O., April 16.—Leonard Dehard and Jack Compton have signed their 1912 contracts. This leaves Arista DeHaven as the only player now in camp who hasn't spread the ink. He is not kicking on the terms of his contract, but he does not like the clause in the new national agreement documents that absolves the club from salary liabilities after a player has been out two weeks on account of sickness or injuries.

BURGLAR LEAVES FEUD BEHIND HIM

Takes Officers' Pistols and Creates Political Disorder.

IN AN INDIANA TOWN

Grenfield, Ind., April 16.—Cordia Martin, a local product in the safeblowing line, stirred up considerable of a political feud when he departed from the county jail without leave, and he may have taken Sheriff Cox's job with him as well as that officer's two best revolvers and two finest padlocks. One charge against the sheriff is that since Martin's escape, the two have met and the sheriff did not arrest the fugitive.

This is Martin's second effort at jail breaking here. The first time he was in a hurry and he dug a hole through the brick wall of the jail, and did not take anything but his own property. Since then he has been freed from the Jeffersonville reformatory by a supreme court technical decision and has gained in dignity.

The political fight over this deported safe blower is between Sheriff Cox, of Hancock county, and Mayor Ora Myers, of Freenville. Cox is a democrat and Myers is a republican. In addition to being mayor, Myers is chief of the police force, which consists of himself and one other man. He was elected on a platform pledging enforcement of the temperance laws and to get them enforced, Myers constituted himself a second member of the force, and he has been doing a great deal of patrol duty.

Maybe a Good Policeman.

Chiefly through Myers' efforts and the aid he obtained from the Indianapolis police department, Martin and his pals, Van Beery and Dan Williams, were arrested after they had robbed half a dozen local stores and blown a couple of safes. Martin, being a local product, has a good many friends here, where his father and his father-in-law, Neville Reeves, and their families, live.

His first escape from jail was a popular achievement with these friends, who are political assets. Besides, say politicians, Myers was making friends very fast among business men and the conviction of Martin would have been another feather in his cap.

Martin was at liberty only a short time, because Mayor Myers aroused all the towns near here, and he was arrested in a neighboring city, returned here and he and his two pals convicted. Then came Martin's release because of something that happened during the trial.

Martin was to have been tried again soon, and an Indianapolis lawyer, known here as "Trook," was engaged to defend him. This lawyer visited him Friday. The same day, a strange young man, identified here as Clark Brown, called at the jail. There were no restrictions on jail callers and this youth was permitted to go to the cell without identifying himself or submitting to search. After visiting Cordia Martin the stranger went to the home of Martin's father.

Officials Are at Odds.

The theory is that a revolver was passed to Martin Friday. Saturday night he escaped, but it seems that someone broke into the jail to help him and got the keys to the padlocks from the nail in the sheriff's dining room, where they also found the revolvers. Anyway, Martin is gone and Myers is very angry and Sheriff Cox is sullen about it.

Myers called a court of inquiry and Harvey Hamilton reported that he had seen Cordia Martin and his father leaving the latter's home in a buggy and notified Cox. Chester Hutton says he saw Cox's buggy overtake one in which the Martins were riding near the Reeves home and demand Cordia's surrender at the point of a revolver. Cox says this is a lie. Hutton also says, in a written statement, that Cox went to the Reeves home. Cox includes that in the lies.

Reeves says Cox came there, that Cordia Martin was not there, but the young man Brown was and that he understood that Brown had been brought there to fool Cox into believing Cordia was there.

The sheriff says that a grand jury that was called to investigate the escape made no charge against him and that he does not know where the Reeves family live. There are some who wonder why he does not.

HELD ON MURDER CHARGE.

Tiffin, O., April 16.—James Utz, sole beneficiary of the will of his rich uncle, Samuel Utz, was indicted yesterday with Fred Omler for first degree murder, charged with having caused the death of Utz, senior.

Omler was a hostler and it is charged he was hired by the nephew to nurse the uncle. He is charged with having administered carbolic acid to the aged man February 3. Both are being held in the county jail.

Coroner Kruse will begin his investigation of the cause of death of W. F. Borgman at 3 o'clock this afternoon. John Harkless, a farmer, was the only eye-witness and will give his testimony. John Bovie, driver of the auto truck, and Glen Tufts, who was on the seat with him, will also be examined, as will Robert B. Clear, with whom Mr. Borgman was riding.

Nearly a hundred members of the Fort Wayne lodge of Red Men went to Columbia City today to attend the district meeting of the organization. The Atwood, Warsaw and Fort Wayne degree staffs will confer the first, second and third degrees. The local party will return tonight over the Pennsylvania No. 24, leaving Columbia City at 11:26 o'clock.

Anniversary Week "Buy For Less"

NORTHERN INDIANA'S GREATEST DEPARTMENT STORE

WOLF & DESSAUER

Nos. 119-121-123-125-127 WEST BERRY ST.

Anniversary Week "Buy For Less"

How We Are Celebrating Our 16th Anniversary This Week

—By giving special bargains all over the store---by marking everything at 10 per cent. less than regular---and by setting aside, every day this week, 2½ per cent. of the cash sales for the Orphans' Fund. That is our idea of a correct birthday celebration---of giving instead of receiving All the people can participate in this event---can have a little celebration of their own by saving on everything they buy.

And more than that—you can add to the comfort of motherless little ones, for part of every dollar you spend here this week is donated to the Orphans' Fund. This fund will be divided among the different Orphanages, to be given to those caring for Orphans. Lend your interest toward making this the largest donation ever!

INDIGESTION

Mi-O-Na Stomach Tablets Quickly End All Stomach Distress and Tone Up the System.

People go on suffering from little stomach troubles for years and imagine they have a serious disease.

They over-eat, over-drink and force on the stomach a lot of extra work.

But they never think that the stomach needs extra help to do extra work.

If these people would take one or two MI-O-NA tablets with or after meals, or whenever distressed, it would be a great big help to the stomach in its strain of overwork.

No matter what you eat or drink MI-O-NA tablets will sweeten your sour stomach and stop gas belching, heaviness, sourness, fermentation or any stomach misery in a few minutes.

And MI-O-NA not only promptly relieves all distress, but if taken regularly will absolutely cure indigestion by building up the flabby, over-worked walls of the stomach and making them strong enough to digest the most hearty meal.

Druggists everywhere offer MI-O-NA stomach tablets for 50 cents a box. Meyer Bros. Co. guarantee it.

O. R. C. and Ladies Auxiliary Present C. T. Matott With Chair.

WABASH TAKES ON MORE MEN

Twenty-Seven Yesterday and Twenty Today Added to Force.

When Passenger Conductor Charles T. Matott, of the Pennsylvania, responded to a knock on his door Saturday night, he looked out upon a "sea of faces," for the porch and yard was full of men and women. Before he took in the situation two strong men bearing a large leather upholstered oak chair crowded past him and the next moment he was seated in it, receiving the congratulations of friends. When these were over, one of the ladies brought in and presented to Mr. Matott a magnificent cake, mounted with fifty lighted candles arranged in rosettes, one candle for each year of his age. Mr. Matott is the chief conductor of the local O. R. C. and the chairman of the joint hall committee which had in charge the leasing and equipping of the magnificent brotherhood hall in the German-American Trust building and the present and surprise given him Saturday night was a slight appreciation of the work he performed for the O. R. C. and the auxiliary. The conductors and the ladies assembled at the home of Conductor and Mrs. W. A. Current, the latter being the president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, and marched thence to the Matott home. Following the presentations came a most pleasant season of social chat, music and cards, followed by ice cream, cakes and other delicacies and the party proved to be one of the very best the conductors and the auxiliary ladies have given. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Grout, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Caskey, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Webber, Mr. and Mrs. John Gruenart, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gruenart, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ebert, Mr. and Mrs. L. ADDED TWENTY TO PAY ROLLS.

Wabash Shop Receives Another Big Addition.

Yesterday the Wabash shop force received an addition of twenty-seven men and today twenty more were added to the rolls, making a total of forty-seven new men in two days, which establishes a new record in that line for those shops. The additions today were Henry Niles, William Horstmeyer, Grover Mapes, C. R. Dolt, F. S. Stetler, Henry Sebastian and R. A. Will, boilermakers; F. C. Frary and C. E. Langley, machinists, and Charles Eigerhere, Neal Jones, Charles W. Rose, Ray Oberhultzer, Otto Dennick, B. Grabokski, M. Defe, Albert Wytnyki, William Hoppes, A. B. Fawset and Maurice Baulky.

NICKEL PLATE CHANGES.

As a result of the resignation of E. K. Allen at the Fort Wayne Electric works, some changes have occurred in the personnel of the force at the Nickel Plate freight office and baggage room. As stated, William Link resigned the office of bill clerk at the Nickel Plate freight office to take one of the positions at the Electric works. Ed Erwin has been appointed line bill clerk to succeed Mr. Link, Reinhart Stetter has been transferred from night baggage agent to the freight office and A. F. Josse has been appointed night baggage man.

WAS NOT UP TO STANDARD.

Yesterday was the last day on which colonist tickets were on sale and the business in Fort Wayne was slightly better than the business of a year ago. Representatives of the passenger department of western roads, who visit Fort Wayne say, however, that the colonist business as a whole this spring was not up to the standard. This is probably due to the fact that Shriner excursion rates will become effective in two weeks—and many contemplate travelers to the Pacific coast are putting off the trip to go with the Shriners.

CHANGE AT FREIGHT OFFICE.

Chief Clerk George Miller, of the Wabash, announces the resignation of C. F. Massel, night bill clerk, and the hiring of Marsh Humphrey, to fill the vacancy. Mr. Massel has taken employment with Chief Clerk Peter Eggiman at the Nickel Plate freight office. Mr. Humphrey was employed by the Wabash once before, resigning several weeks ago to take other employment.

OFF FOR FLORIDA.

Ross LaMar, machinist in the Pennsylvania shops, left this morning for Florida, where he will be joined later by C. W. Grosvenor, of the same shop, and several other Fort Wayne people. Florida seems to have unusual attractions for Pennsylvania employes at present. Several of them are down there now and others only recently returned or are preparing for a visit. Some have invested in lands and town lots in different parts of that state.

SPECIAL FOR M. E. DELEGATES.

Some time during the night of April 29 or the morning of April 30 there will be a special train through this city, over the Pennsylvania, carrying the Philadelphia delegation to the general conference of the M. E. church at Minneapolis. The train will be made up of Pullman cars a diner and a baggage car and will be first-class in every particular.

B. L. F. LADIES TO ENTERTAIN.

Hyacinth lodge, Ladies' Society to A. G. Porter lodge, No. 141, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, will be entertained at the home of Mrs. H. B. Widner, 1325 Maud street, Wednesday afternoon, between the hours of 2:30 and 5:30. The members of A. G. Porter lodge are invited.

GOING BACK TO THE SHOP.

Engine 9052, which for six months was stationed east of the Pennsylvania power plant and served as an auxiliary boiler plant in running the power of the shops during repairs to the power plant boilers, will soon be in service on the road. It was taken into the back shops this morning for general repairs.

SOME ENGINEMEN SICK.

Engineers J. C. McCarthy, W. Trautman, F. Crawford, C. W. Larimore, James McGuire and C. S. Lopshire, of the Pennsylvania, are off duty. Mr. Lopshire has an injured eye and the others are sick.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

G. H. Engle, traffic manager of the New York Central, will pass through the city in a private car on Pennsylvania train No. 25 tonight.

E. R. Ansberry, a Pennsylvania shopman, is visiting in Chicago. R. Schwartz, a pipefitter in the same shop, will visit Chicago the latter part of next week.

A. Hettler and M. B. Whitmore, Pennsylvania shopmen, are sick and off duty. H. Roebuck, who had a toe crushed a week ago, resumed work in the smith shop this morning.

Traveling Secretary H. O. Williams, of the railroad department of the Y. M. C. A., was in Peru last week in the effort to raise money to pay the debts of the association in that city. Rest rooms and other additions have been made recently to the Railroad Y. M. C. A. at Peru and these have left the association in debt about $17,000, which Mr. Williams is endeavoring to liquidate.

C. R. Aiken, of the Pennsylvania erecting shop, had his left hand bruised and cut when a heavy sledge hammer hit the member. The injury will cause Mr. Aiken to be off duty several weeks.

F. W. Schaefer, a boilermaker at the Pennsylvania shops, received the force of a misdirected blow of a sledge on his left leg, a short distance below the knee yesterday, inflicting a wound that will disable him for some time.

Foreman G. F. Rogge, of the arc lamp room at the Electric works, added two machinists to his force this morning. Lester Baker, one of the new men, was formerly employed in an automobile factory in New Castle and the other, H. Boester, was formerly employed in the meter assembling department at the works.

Frank Trumbull, chairman of the board of directors of the Chesapeak & Ohio road, says that company will purchase no more new lines. This statement was inspired by the rumor that the C. & O. had acquired the Carolina, Clinchfield and Ohio and the Pere Marquette lines. Last week there was a rumor in Fort Wayne that the C. & O. had purchased the Wabash.

WORKED FORTY-TWO YEARS IN PENNSYLVANIA BOILER SHOP.

Henry Lageman, of 457 St. Martin street, whose portrait is shown above, left today in company with his wife for Germany, where they will spend three months with the people who were their associates in their childhood days. Mr. Lageman was born at Grepta Amt, Osnabrucrsch, Hanover, Germany, August 16, 1849, and in 1869, when he was 20 years old, he came to America and in April, 1870, he took employment as an apprentice in the boiler department of the Pennsylvania shops. He has been there, working at his trade, ever since. The trip abroad is being made in the hope that it would restore Mr. Lageman's health. In November, 1910, while in the effort to lower a barrel of cider into his cellar by means of a skid, Mr. Lageman was caught under the barrel when it slipped off the skids and sustained a fractured leg and other injuries from which he never fully recovered, though he has been able to work some since. For a number of years Mr. Lageman has been boiler inspector at the round house. Mrs. Lageman was born in Denmark and she has relatives and many friends residing in that country which she and her husband will visit while abroad. Karl Peterson, also a native of Denmark, is accompaanying Mr. and Mrs. Lageman on the trip. Mr. Peterson is employed by the Kerr Murray Manufacturing company.

LOVESICK GIRL ENDS HER LIFE

Angered When Her Lover's Parents Object to Marriage.

STUMBLE OVER BODY

Muncie, Ind., April 16.—Angry because the parents of her sweetheart would not allow them to marry, Miss Helen Kohler, the 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian Kohler, farmers, committed suicide last night by drinking carbolic acid. When the parents returned home after attending the funeral of a relative, they stumbled upon the body of their young daughter lying on the floor in the front room of the house. Beside her was found the following note:

"Telephone Billie at the brewery, and please don't bury me until he has seen my body."

"Billie" was the sweetheart of the young girl.

During the afternoon the girl called her two sisters by telephone and told them to take good care of themselves. When asked what she meant she told them she was only "kidding." It is believed that the girl immediately swallowed the acid after talking to her sisters as indications pointed that the girl had been dead for several hours when found.

NYHOFF WILL SUE.

Gary, Ind., April 16.—John J. Nyhoff, formerly commissioner of public works of Gary, a defendant in the Gary bribery cases in connection with the passage of the Dean heating franchise, whose case was dismissed in the Porter county circuit court at Valparaiso Saturday, will start suits for malicious prosecution and defamation of character. Governor Marshall, T. B. Dean and others will be made defendants. Damages aggregating $500,000 are to be asked.

HORSEMAN IS DEAD.

Valparaiso, Ind., April 16.—B. E. (Brick) Sherman, 57, a horseman for years, prominent along northern Indiana and southern Illinois race circuits, died here yesterday of pneumonia.

WOMAN MAY DIE.

Valparaiso, Ind., April 16.—Mrs. John Gabour's right arm and a portion of the right breast were torn away when a double barrel shot gun in the hands of her husband was discharged yesterday while he was engaged in removing the shells. The woman is not expected to live.

GOES IN THE REAL ESTATE BUSINESS.

Harry E. Dial, one of the best known farmers of St. Joe township, has sold one of his 40-acre farms and has retired from farming and will devote his entire time to the buying and selling of farm land and general real estate in Indiana, Ohio and Michigan. It is assured that Mr. Dial will make a success in his new venture; being a young man of 38 years of age, and a tireless worker, and being a fine judge of land and actual experience in farming, will be the greatest help to him.

Mr. Dial came to Indiana from Illinois in 1904 and worked for the traction company and the Bell Telephone Co., as an electrician and lineman. Mr. Dial is one of our city men that went to farming six years ago, renting an 80-acre farm; after getting moved out and settled, Mr. Dial $1.70 in cash, but by attending to and devoting his entire tim to the farm he made good from the start, and today Mr. Dial owns one of the best 40-acre farms in Allen county, three miles from the court house. Mr. Dial being from Illinois, he has ocr a hundred letters from Illinois and Iowa farmers that want to locate in and around Fort Wayne on account of the fine market and schools and has decided to take this step in helping his fellowmen.

Mr. Dial will be popular with the home people on account of being the state retired champion wrestler of Indiana, and was always popular with the fans, and a host of his friends will be pleased to have him among them once more.

CHAIRMAN HOUK ISSUES LETTER

County Republican Leader Wants Clean Tactics Used Friday.

THE ELECTION JUDGES

Republican County Chairman A. E. Houk, in completing arrangements for the county primaries to be held Friday for the election of thirty-one delegates to the Auburn convention, April 23, has mailed out copies of resolutions adopted at the last meeting of the republican county central committee, which include among other things, a plea for clean balloting. The resolution instructs the judge in each precinct to challenge all doubtful voters, not allowing them to vote unless they prove they have a legal right to do so and promise to support the republican nominees for president at the November election.

Arrangements for the primaries have been delayed somewhat on account of the committeemen failing to promptly send in the names of their registration clerks. Judges for the Friday primaries have been selected as follows:

In the city—Jacob Funk, First ward; Kent L. Sweet, Second ward; W. D. C. Kayser, Third ward; James Henry, Fourth ward; Harry McMillan, Fifth ward; Noah Egly, Sixth ward; Richard Morton, Seventh ward; Ralph Wilkening, Eighth ward; William Buchfield, Ninth ward; B. F. Geyer, Tenth ward.

In the country—Oscar Bonlton, Springfield and Scipio townships; P. A. Irving, Maumee and Milan townships; Nelson Craig, St. Joseph and Cedar Creek townships; W. H. Barnhart, Eel River and Perry townships; Albert Larimer, Lake and Aboite townships; A. E. Hadley, Marion and Madison townships; J. C. Newlin, Lafayette and Pleasant townships; John Woswald, Waashington township, outside of the city; Charles Fletter, Wayne township, outside of the city; Jason Battenberg, Monroe and Jackson townships; A. F. McIntosh, Jefferson township and Adams township, outside of the city.

Allen county Roosevelt supporters met Monday evening at the headquarters in the Pixley-Long block and enjoyed a "love feast" over the results of the election in Pennsylvania, where the Oyster Bay colonel won a sweeping victory. The workers for "Teddy" also made plans for the primaries Friday. According to Louis N. Litman, district director of the Roosevelt forces, and Will C. Geake, county Roosevelt leader, it is planned to get out a big vote and make Roosevelt's victory even greater than at the last primary when delegates were selected for the Indianapolis meeting. Present at the meeting last night, among others, were L. T. Bailey, W. H. Kissinger, John T. Clapham and C. H. Holderbaum, of Columbia City.

The Wonderful Cures
DR. HARDMAN

Has effected and the MARVELOUS RESULTS he has attained in the way of restoring health and happiness to the sick and afflicted has been occasioned by a thorough study of those few diseases which he treats by always keeping in touch with the very latest discoveries and most scientific methods which are being introduced from time to time by the world's greatest investigators. In other words, keeping up to date to the very minute; and you may depend upon it that at his office you can procure all of the newest remedies and latest methods that have proven effective; besides, you get the benefit of the sixteen years' experience which the doctor has had in the treatment of PELVIC, NERVOUS and CHRONIC DISEASES. The man who has not kept track of the wonderful advances made in the treatment of disease will surely be amazed to know that it has far exceeded, in the last five years, that of any other particular branch of science.

TUBERCULOSIS, the great destroyer, yields to the Radium treatment. Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism, Blood Poison and diseases wherein there is a poisoned condition of the blood or a deficiency in the quality or quantity can be CURED by introducing the proper medicine directly into the blood stream. Call; I will prove it to your entire satisfaction.

VARICOCELE, RUPTURE, PILES, FISTULA, STRICTURE, etc., cured without the use of the knife and without detention from business.

If you are sick and good health appeals to you as desirable you will make a very great mistake if you do not call at once instead of waiting until the hearse backs up to the door.

Remember that here you get the very best, regardless of any expense to me. If you are satisfied with cheap, worthless treatment, that can only harm instead of help, do not come, as I am too busy trying to help those that do appreciate my skill and the vast amount of expense and trouble necessary to bring to you everything in the way of treatment that is necessary or desirable.

Office Hours—9-12, 1-5, 7-8. Sundays, 9-12 Only. Not open Friday Evenings.

INTOLERABLE!
The Sweatnomore Powder Co.
Gentlemen: I hereby wish to send you an entirely unsolicited, bona fide testimonial of the benefits of your Sweatnomore antiseptic powder.
Though I never had any personal use for this powder, I can nevertheless say in truth, that it is one of the most wonderful and beneficial remedies that has been found, as it not only benefits the user of the same, but also those that must necessarily come in contact with such as are afflicted with sweaty feet. In my occupation I was obliged to work at the same desk with one who was so afflicted, and the offensive odor was simply intolerable; in fact, I was seriously thinking of resigning my position, when, thanks to your wonderful discovery, he began using Sweatnomore powder, and in consequence I am still holding my position.
Kindly accept the thanks of a sincerely grateful man.
Sincerely yours,

TYPHOID TRACED TO THE HOSTESS

Operation Made Woman Incubator for Fever and Ptomaine Germs.

INTEREST IN THE CASE

Newton, Kan., April 15.—More than fifty persons living near here have contraced typhoid fever during the last nine years from Mrs. Ben Donher, who lives on a farm four miles from the city. Typhoid developed so often in her neighborhood that doctors made an investigation and an operation has been performed on Mrs. Donher in an effort to eradicate the germs.

The trouble started when she was operated on for gall stones. The wound did not heal readily and from this incision in her side typhoid and ptomaine infection spread.

Mrs. Donher's nearest neighbor, Mrs. Rockhold, often visited at the Donher home and ate there. Six months after Mrs. Donher was operated on Mrs. Rockhold developed typhoid and died. Another neighbor, Sam McDonald, had typhoid after visiting the Donhers, and two boys, Champ Tipton and Frank Ruggles, were attacked by the disease after spending the night at her home.

Mrs. Hanson and her children visited the house and all became ill of typhoid, and similar cases became so frequent that doctors thought there must be something wrong with the well on the Donher farm. Dr. O. J. Furst, now living in California, studied the case and finally decided that Mrs. Donher was spreading the disease. The operation performed on her showed this theory to be correct.

On one occasion Mrs. Donher entertained the women of a missionary society and served chicken sandwiches, which she prepared herself. These were given to twenty-six persons, and all but two of them were made violently ill with ptomaine poisoning.

The case attracted so much attention that many physicians from other cities came here to witness the operation by which the germ deposits were removed.

Al. W. Kwoczalla, 834 No. 8th St., Terre Haute, Ind., the well known labor union leader, says: "I had a severe case of kidney trouble and took a great deal of medicine but derived no benefit from them. While suffering greatly I took Foley's Kidney Pills and in a short time they cured me and I highly recommend them." Dreier Drug Co., Two Stores.

Hogs Loose and on Rampage.

The sleeping citizens on a certain street in Rochester, N. Y., were awakened the other morning before daylight by an unusual noise. What the awakened people saw was a strange sight when they shivered their ways to the windows and looked into the street. The roadway was filled with a drove of hogs, whose gruntings and squealings had joined to cause the disturbance. A short time before they had been snugly packed in live stock cars on the railroad. But there had been a wreck and thousands of hogs were released from their prisons. They invaded the town and started immediately on the chief business of their existence, the acquirement and disposal of food. Some householders sought the morning paper only to find a disconsolate hog sitting on the doorstep, but many others were startled from time to time by noisy visits to the garbage pails in the alley. And the garbage collectors' wagons were the leaders of processions. It was well into the day before the swine had been rounded up and again put into strong captivity.

Mrs. Minnie Moody, Frankfort, Ind., has found Foley's Honey and Tar Compound to give such good results that she uses it for all coughs and colds with the best results. She says: "I wish to recommend Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It is the only thing I ever found to relieve my little girl of a cough." Dreier Drug Co., Two Stores.

For Freckled, Rough or Spotty Complexions

(From the Dermatologist.)

The freckling, discoloring or roughening to which delicate skins are subject after exposure to wind or sun, often appearing in spring, may readily be gotten rid of. Mercolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the disfigured skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any druggists'. There's no more effective way of banishing freckles or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

Wrinkles caused by weather, worry or illness are best treated by a simple solution of powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in a half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in this produces a truly marvelous transformation.

BLUE LIGHT AN ANESTHETIC

Eastern Scientist Has Demonstrated the Fact in a Thorough Series of Experiments.

"One of the most remarkable actions of light has recently come to our attention," says the editor of the Journal of Surgery. "In an address before the Boston Physio-Therapeutic society Dr. E. C. Titus has demonstrated that blue light possessed remarkable anesthetic power.

"In his experiments he used a series of slender glass rods about one-eighth of an inch in thickness, placed side by side and tied together so as to form a kind of flexible mat which will adapt itself to various parts of the body. The glass must be of cobalt blue and transmit no red rays, this being a very important point. The rods are to be placed upon the area to be anesthetized, and some form of white light, preferably a tungsten lamp, brought as closely as possible without causing discomfort.

"Strange to relate, in twenty minutes the part becomes insensitive, so that superficial and even deep incisions or punctures are no longer felt. This anesthesia lasts for one-half hour or more, and has occurred so constantly that there is no reason to believe that it is the result of suggestion or accident. Minor surgical operations have been performed under this method and without the least pain or discomfort, and there seems to be enough in it to merit attention.

"More than thirty years ago there prevailed what was afterwards termed the blue glass craze. All sorts of ailments were thought to be amenable to the action of blue light, and the newspapers were filled with glowing accounts of cures. Enthusiasm ran riot for a time and then the matter dropped out of sight.

"Some time later there was a revival of interest in phototherapy when Finsen demonstrated the curative properties of the ultra-violet ray in various affections, especially lupus. Since then the physiological action of light has been carefully investigated and although much remains to be learned, there can be no doubt that we are nearer to an appreciation of its possibilities in the treatment of disease."

Mr. H. W. Winkler, 328 Huston Ave., Evansville, Ind., says he was cured of a severe case of kidney trouble through Foley Kidney Pills. He writes: "My kidneys were in bad shape and I suffered terribly with pains in my back, and the kidney action was very irregular. I took Foley Kidney Pills and now I am perfectly well and feel like a new man." Dreier Drug Co., Two Stores.

Our Life's Story.

Very often the success which attended our early efforts turns its back upon us in later years, and while for a time we may try to continue in detail the story of our alternate hopes and fears, our victories and our defeats, we soon realize that the record is a sorry one, and we feel ashamed to continue its recountal. We forget the early promises we made to be sincere in the matter of making up our record, and because the story is not one of unalloyed success and prosperity we grow disloyal to our better selves and believe that by making no further entries in our diaries we bring them to a close. Just as we recall to memory in later years, however, the small volumes of our early youth, with their interrupted stories, we are prone also to look deeply into the record we have written in the real diary of life. It was Barrie who said that "the life of every man is a diary in which he means to write one story and writes another, and his humblest hour is when he compares the volume as it is with what he vowed to make it."

We cannot release ourselves from the obligation of writing the diary of our lives. We make the records whether we are willing or not, and for each hour and day of the year of life given to us here on earth there is a faithful entry made.—Charleston News and Courier.

Chapman & Hall, the English publishers of Charles Dickens' novels, report that the order of popularity of these stories, as indicated by their sales, is as follows: (1) "Tale of Two Cities;" (2) "David Copperfield;" (3) "Pickwick Papers;" (4) "Nicholas Nickleby;" (5) "Oliver Twist;" (6) "Old Curiosity Shop;" (7) "Martin Chuzzlewit." The firm sold 750,000 copies of the novels in 1911. On one of them, "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," the publishers still retain a copyright.

HORSESHOE FOR LUCK

ONE OF THE OLDEST OF ALL KNOWN SUPERSTITIONS.

Had Its Origin in the Belief in Witches—Steeds of the Greeks and Romans Were Not Shod—Japanese Use Sandals.

It is not difficult to understand why lovers of horses came to adopt the horseshoe as a talisman against misfortune. Horses were considered to be especially liable to the machinations of witches. This fact stands out in all the records of the Lancashire witches and other evil hags.

If precautions were not taken these mischievous witches would ride the horses at dead of night over the hills, and when the owner came to the stables in the morning he would find his animals in lather and utterly exhausted. A horseshoe fastened over the stable door was believed to ward off such evil.

There is no superstition more deeply ingrained in all classes of society than that which is attached to the horseshoe. As an emblem of good fortune it holds pride of place. Nelson did not disdain to nail a horseshoe to the mast of the Victory. In the early part of the nineteenth century the horseshoe was very highly prized, and there were few mansions where it was not displayed, while humbler folks were at great pains to fasten it over their doors.

Horses were not shod either by the Greeks or Romans. The ancients were content with wrapping fiber cloth round the feet of their horses in cold weather, or when it was necessary to pass through miry districts. Instead of troubling about horseshoes they devoted their attention to hardening the hoofs of their mounts.

Nero, who ever strove to outdistance his contemporaries, caused his horse to be shod with silver, while his wife's were resplendent with gold, but in no case were nails driven into the hoofs. The practice of shoeing horses by driving nails into the hoofs was introduced into England by William the Conqueror, but such practice did not make any headway for centuries.

The Indians, who had no superiors as horsemen, never thought of shoeing their mounts in any way, and yet they were capable of performing remarkable journeys over most difficult country. The Sandown derby was won by a horse running in a natural state. The race was run twice owing to the fact that three horses made a dead heat on the first occasion. Prior to the second attempt the owner of Marden gave orders for the light plates to be removed from the hoofs of his nominee, with the result that Marden gained a comfortable victory by three lengths.

Even at the present day in Japan the modern horseshoe finds a strong competitor in the old-fashioned sandals made of straw which are fastened to the horse's hoofs after the manner of equine "cricket shoes."

Recently a French specialist, Dr. De Keating Hart, has been demonstrating what is known as the fulguration treatment of cancer, effectually prevents the recurrence of this otherwise fatal disease. The theory of the treatment is that after a malignant tumor has been removed the healthy cells that surround it are made by sparks of extremely high static electricity incapable of ever again being able to harbor and promulgate cancerous germs. At a recent demonstration Doctor Hart stood with the conductor of his machine in his hand, and as each tumor was removed he applied his treatment, sparks of great fineness but extreme brilliancy shooting from the instrument into the cavity made by the surgeon's knife. He explained that it had been discovered that these sparks were able so to change the healthy cells upon which the cancer had grown as to render their nature entirely different. This fact has been demonstrated by a microscopic examination, but, curiously enough, the sparks appear to have no effect whatever upon the diseased cells themselves. The greatest care has therefore to be taken to insure the complete extirpation of the cancer before the treatment is applied.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

Solves the Problem of Good Hair.

After Prof. Sabouraud confirmed the germ origin of dandruff, science was confronted by a new problem which was not solved until the discovery of Newbro's Herpicide. Herpicide being the first successful preparation compounded in harmony with this new theory, becomes the original remedy to kill the dandruff germ.

Since then, numerous preparations said to be "just as good" as Herpicide have been thrown upon the market; others have adopted Herpicide claims, and without making any change in their remedies, but none have ever reached the same degree of popularity. Everywhere this remedy is recognized as the one genuine dandruff germ destroyer. As a result Herpicide has more satisfied users than all other hair preparations combined.

Being the original remedy, users expect more astonishing results from Herpicide than they would look for from any other preparation and they usually get them. So wonderful has been the success of this germicide that it is now recognized as the standard hair remedy of the world.

Herpicide kills the dandruff germ, checks falling hair. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

For sale at drug stores. One dollar tions obtainable at the good barber shops. Insist on having real Herpicide. Send 10c in postage for sample and book to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R, Detroit, Mich. Bradley Bros., 627

UP IN ARMS AGAINST CRITICS

London Theater Managers Resent "Roasts" and Newspaper Makes a Plain Talk.

One can easily sympathize with an actor manager, and not less, as in a recent instance, with an actress-manageress, who finds that personal estimates of the merits of a play are not indorsed either by the critics or by that far more important section of the community, the playgoing public. But the growing practice on the part of those who control our theaters of showing something like petulance, or worse, when they find they have made a mistake is full of awkward possibilities. Gerald du Maurier's outburst is the latest instance in point. Because those whom he invited to express opinions on his new venture, "The Dust of Egypt," told the truth about it and failed to indulge in paeans of praise he writes a portentous letter to ask "What is a critic?" The best answer we have seen comes from A. C. Benson: "I suppose that an expert critic is a man with a natural faculty of discrimination which has been trained by experience." One is disposed to believe, after witnessing the sorry stuff so often put upon the stage, that a little more exercise of a faculty for discrimination trained by experience would be to the general advantage in the enterprise of the theater. It would spare the critics many dull hours, the managers much loss of money, and—where they cannot take their losses in a sporting spirit—of temper, while the public opinion of the stage and all its works would be immensely improved.—The Globe, London.

John M. Schenck, Fountaintown, Ind., recommends Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. He says: "I was troubled with asthma about four years, so bad I could not sleep. I took everything I heard of for asthma and doctored also but got no relief until I tried Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It helped me from the first dose, and the continued use cured me. It is now a long time since I was cured, and I have no symptoms of a return of the disease." Dreier Drug Co., Two Stores.

CAN NOT PROTECT "GOOD FELLOWS"

Pawnbrokers Must Report All Loans to the Police Chief.

COMPANY PAYS FINE

Pawnbrokers must report all loans made to customers and they cannot protect "good fellows" who put up their jewelry or other valuables to bridge over temporary financial stress.

This was decided in the city court today where the Fort Wayne Credit company was fined $25 and costs for failure to make the reports to the police department required under a city ordinance passed a couple of years ago. It was a test case.

There was no denial of the failure to make the report, but the proprietors of the agency took the position that they thought the ordinance was designed to cover only suspicious cases and that where they knew persons who obtained loans and knew the property pledged was owned by them there was no need to make any report. The fine was paid.

The Other Cases.

John C. Belot was cited to show why he had not killed a dog ordered by the mayor to be killed. He said it wasn't his dog and the case was dropped.

Five vags were picked up during the forenoon by Patrolman Majors, who is devoting his energies toward the extermination of begging tramps who infest the west end of the city. Two were let go and the others were fined.

PLEAD FOR NEWS THRO' NIGHT

Harris had been saved, but no word came regarding her husband.

Will Arrive Thursday.

Vice President Franklin, of the International Mercantile marine, said today that he had heard that the Cunarder Carpathia would arrive here on Thursday evening and that his information was that there were 675 survivors of the Titanic on board.

DOUBLY PROVEN

Fort Wayne Readers Can No Longer Doubt the Evidence.

This Fort Wayne citizen testified long ago.

Told of quick relief—of lasting benefit.

The facts are now confirmed.

Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.

It forms convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. Mary Gerdes, 901 Archer St., Fort Wayne, Ind., says: "I was afflicted with kidney complaint for nine years and my condition was so poor that I could hardly attend to my housework. My back ached constantly and my back was so weak that I could not stoop. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a box at Meyer Bros. Co.'s drug store and they proved to be just what I needed. In a few days the backache was relieved and before long I was restored to good health. I am always pleased to give Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement." (Statement given on December 4, 1908.)

CONFIRMED PROOF.

On June 30, 1910, Mrs. Gerdes said: "Since I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills, I have had little or no trouble from my kidneys. I will always hold a high opinion of this remedy."

Mr. Franklin said that he did not expect to receive any further wireless messages from the Olympic on this side of the Atlantic and that Captain Haddock, of that steamship, would soon be in position to send all his wireless reports to the London office.

A cablegram from London received at the steamship offices in the night, concerning the fate of Sir Cosmo and Lady Duff-Gordon, remained unanswered until this morning, when it was definitely ascertained Sir Cosmo and Lady Duff-Gordon were among the passengers taken from the Titanic and now on board the Carpathia.

Long distance telephone calls came from Philadelphia throughout the night inquiring for the many society folks from that city aboard the Titanic. The name of Mrs. George D. Widener, of Elkin's Park, was posted as among those on board the Carpathia. The names of her husband and her son, Harry Elkins Widener, did not appear among those saved.

FRANKLIN GIVES OUT THE MESSAGE

Telegram Which Told of Disaster at First Withheld.

JUSTIFIES HIS ACT

New York, April 16.—Vice President Franklin, of the White Star line, has been criticised today for his definite reassuring declarations of yesterday which tended, as alleged, to mislead the public. Mr. Franklin this afternoon gave to the public the full text of the wireless message received from Captain Haddock of the Olympic yesterday afternoon:

"The reason I did not give it out last night," Mr. Franklin said, "was because it was so discouraging that I felt that it would not be right to alarm the public unnecessarily. Now that the worst is known I am willing to give it out. Here it is:

"'Carpathia reached Titanic's position at day break. Found boats and wreckage only. Titanic had foundered about 2:20 a. m. in 41.16 n, 50.15 w. All boats accounted for. About 675 souls saved, crew and passengers. Latter nearly all women and children. Leyland liner S. S. Californian remaining and searching for exact position of disaster. Carpathia returning to New York with survivors. Please inform Cunard. Haddock.'"

ORDERS OUT SCOUT CRUISER.

Taft Sends Speedy Salem to Meet Incoming Carpathia.

Washington, April 16.—At the direction of President Taft the secretary of the navy has ordered the speedy scout cruiser Salem to proceed to sea at once from Hampton Roads, Va., and meet the Carpathia. The Salem is equipped with the best wireless apparatus in the navy, capable of sending a distance of 1,000 miles and by order of the president her commander will obtain a complete list of the Titanic's survivors, and send the names by wireless to the government here.

In case the Salem has not sufficient coal in her bunkers to start immediately the secretary gave provisional orders to the cruiser North Carolina, also at Hampton Roads, to perform the mission. Either one or the other will be on its way tonight.

WOMAN CROSSES CHANNEL.

Harriet Quimby, American Air Woman, is First to Win Honor.

Boulogne-Sur-Mer, France, April 16.—Miss Harriett Quimby, an American air woman, crossed the English channel from Dover this morning, landing at Hardelot, in the vicinity of this port.

Miss Quimby is the first woman to accomplish the feat of flying across the channel alone. Her flight occupied two hours. She learned to fly in France and holds a French airpilot's certificate.

AN OVER-HEATED STOVE

Caused Early Forenoon Blaze in Rooming House.

The fire department was called at 7 o'clock this forenoon to the rooming house of J. T. Johnson, 122 West Main street, by a small blaze in one of the rooms of the building. The wainscoating caught fire from an overheated stove. It was quickly extinguished. The loss is placed at $25. The building belongs to Horace Marriotte.

Found Bones of Soldiers.

During the recent excavations in the historic ground of Abbey lane, Athlone, Ireland, for the commonplace purpose of constructing a sewer, some remarkable finds were made by the excavating party. Not far beneath the soil they came in contact with a large quantity of human remains. There were no symptoms of coffins, but several skulls and bones were thrown up. Evidences of a very substantial foundation which were also unearthed, four feet under the surface, and the human remains buried apparently in a trench in the immediate vicinity, gave rise to the supposition that the skeletons were those of the Irish soldiers who fought in the sieges near the famous old bridge of Athlone. The Abbey was founded by Cistercian monks the same year that the site of the castle was taken over by King John, with other lands adjoining, which belonged to the monks; and in exchange the king gave to the monastery the lands known today as Monksland, on the borders of the town. A holy water fount was also unearthed.

building and Dry Dock company, "but smashing into an iceberg could produce shattering effects that would render a ship helpless beyond the protection of any design yet known. In fore and after collisions where the compartments are punctured, the lowering of either end of the ship produces an increased strain on the other compartments."

Granting that only the forward bulkhead of the Titanic had been crumpled by the impact with the iceberg, Mr. Hopkins was inclined to think that the relative buoyancy of the remaining compartments would have been sufficient to save the vessel. Inasmuch as he was not familiar with the relative division of the Titanic compartments he could not estimate how many compartments must have given way under the impact of the collision.

Source of Grave Peril.

Icebergs, one has the one that spelled disaster for the Titanic, are one of three sources of gravest peril to vessels navigating the north Atlantic. The other two are fog and derelicts. The iceberg menace has been greater this spring than in any recent year.

In the past fifty years there have been an even dozen disasters to big liners for which icebergs were responsible. A majority of these occurred off New Foundland and the Grand Banks, in the general vicinity of the Titanic's grave.

The drift ice this spring has been farther south than for years. Vessels arriving here and abroad have reported ice fields extending far down into the southern track, and skippers have told of being shut in by ice as far as they could see on every side of the horizon.

The size of the bergs which have been encountered recently varies greatly, but according to reliable reports, bergs reaching from 60 to 100 feet to the top of its walls, with pinnacles and spires extending to a height of 250 feet or more, have not been unusual. Below the water some of these giant bergs extend to a depth of probably 800 or 1,000 feet.

First Case on Record.

In the melancholy roll of marine tragedies that which overtook the Titanic is the first on record wherein a conspicuous vessel has met disaster on her maiden voyage.

The nearest approach to such an unfortunate fate was the cruiser of the Naronic, which singularly enough belonged to the same line. She went to the port of missing ships on her second voyage. Carrying about 300 all told, she steamed out of this port on her return trip nearly twenty years ago, and since then there has never been a word as to how she met her fate.

Titanic's Equipment.

Statistical information of the life saving apparatus of the Olympic, sister ship of the Titanic was given out today by the bureau of inspection of steam vessels. Figures for the Titanic are not available, but as the two ships are almost identical in size it is not likely that their life saving equipment materially differs.

The Olympic has 16 life boats and four rafts calculated to accommodate 1,171 people. This means about one-third of the total number of passengers and crew together, which is 3,447 can be accommodated. It was stated at the bureau that no ship is required to have sufficient boat room to accommodate all its complete passenger and crew list.

The Olympic carries 3,455 life preservers and 48 life buoys, and these equipments are made in compliance with the regulations of the British board of trade. The United States buren has no power except to see that each steamship meets the requirements of its home government.

The Young Ladies' society of the Emmaus Lutheran church will enjoy a social Wednesday evening atthe school hall.

IF ELECTION WAS IN LOWER HOUSE

Parties Control 22 Delegations Each and Are Tied on Other Four.

WHAT WOULD RESULT?

Washington, April 16.—If the house were called upon to elect a president, as it was in 1801, when Thomas Jefferson was chosen, and in 1825, when John Quincy Adams was chosen, it would start off in a deadlock. Each state is entitled to one vote, and the majority of a state delegation determines the vote. Twenty-two states have democratic majorities, while four state delegations are tied.

What if Senator LaFollette and William J. Bryan get together and organize a third party and nominate a candidate for the presidency? What if there are three candidates in the field and no one is elected? Whom would the house elect?

There is talk of a third party. Friends of Senator LaFollete say that if Taft and Harmon are put up by the republicans and the democrats respectively, they would join Bryan and name a progressive candidate. If this should be done and there be no election the house would have to elect.

The democrats are in the majority in the Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Colorado, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Arizona and Missouri delegations, and the republicans in the New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Kansas, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and California delegations.

The Maine, Rhode Island, Nebraska and New Mexico delegations are divided equally between democrats and republicans, and therefore could not cast a vote.

Two presidents were elected by the house—Jefferson in 1801, and Adams in 1825.

The party candidates in 1800 were: Federalists, John Adams, of Massachusetts, and C. C. Pinckney, of South Carolina; republicans, Thomas Jefferson, of Virginia, and Aaron Burr, of New York. A republican legislature, which was to chose electors, was elected in New York April 28, 1800. This defeat of the federalists caused an outbreak between the Adams and Hamilton factions in the party. Hamilton's friends, called the "British faction," were dismissed from the president's cabinet. Hamilton made a bitter attack on Adams and tried to bring about the election of Pinckney to the presidency, relegating Adams to second place. The result of the election was in doubt until South Carolina gave the deciding vote to the republicans.

But owing to defective provisions in the constitution, the election was undecided and had to be settled in the house. The electoral votes were found to be: For Jefferson, 73; for Burr, 73; for Adams, 65; for Pinckney, 64; for John Jay, 1. Then the house had to decide between Jefferson and Burr, republicans who were tied. The house was federalist, but had to elect a republican. Burr was preferred by most of the federalists to Jefferson, their most dangerous foe. On the first ballot, February 11, 1801, eight states voted for Jefferson, six for Burr and two being equally divided, could not vote; so there was no election. February 17 ten states voted for Jefferson then switched his influence to Jefferson then switched his influence to Jefferson. Delaware changed its vote, and Jefferson was declared president and Burr vice president. The election was held in the new federal city of Washington.

The presidential election of 1824 was more a personal than a party contest. The leading candidates were Henry Clay, of Kentucky; speaker of the house; John Quincy Adams, of Massachusetts, secretary of state; William H. Crawford, of Georgia, secretary of the treasury, and Andrew Jackson, private citizen of Tennessee. Crawford and Jackson were "strict constructionists" and Clay and Adams "loose constructionists." Jackson leaned toward a protective tariff. The friends of each supported John C. Calhoun, of South Carolina, for the vice presidency.

No candidate received a majority of the electors and a president had to be chosen by the house. The vote stood: Jackson, 99; Adams, 84; Crawford, 41; Clay, 37. Clay, being fourth on the list, was not eligible now, and he and his friends naturally leaned to Adams, the other "loose construction" candidate. A coalition was formed and thirteen states voted for Adams, seven for Jackson and four for Crawford. Much bad feeling was engendered between the "strict constructionists" and the "loose constructionists" because of the combination of Adams and Clay, and the selection of Clay for Adams' cabinet lent color to the charge of a bargain between them for the Clay votes. The Clay and Adams parties united and named their organization the "national republican party." The Jackson men became the democratic party.

The insurgents would have the whip hand if the house were called upon to select a president, out of three candidates. If Taft, Roosevelt and Harmon were all to go under the wire together Wisconsin, North Dakota or Kansas could have much to do with naming the man.

Fields' Shaft of Real Wit.

Charles A. Bigelow, the comedian, who died a few weeks ago, was made to order for the wags of the old Weber and Fields company, says a Chicago writer. He knew it, but he couldn't defend himself and was hopped on pretty regularly by Collier, Dailey and Fields. Bigelow's appearance led to one of the best impromptu lines ever put over. One show presented him as a Spanish grandee who was giving a garden party for his daughter (Lillian Russell). Bigelow's lean calves were in white stockings and his bald head was partly covered with a bull fighter's hat, worn rakishly. Fields, looking him over, asked the significance of the attire, and Bigelow replied that he was dressed that way out of compliment to his daughter. All through the rehearsal period Fields fished for a line to fit in here, and it came the opening night when he said: "I should hate to see you dressed as an insult."

TRICKS PLAYED BY DYNAMITE

Dangerous Stuff to Handle at All Times—Accidents Often Result of Carelessness.

"It is generally supposed that when a charge of dynamite has exploded it is all over—that the entire charge has been consumed," said a "hard rock" man who has worked in mines, in river tunnels and other places where high explosives are used. "This supposition, however, is not correct," he continued. "Sometimes particles of dynamite will be blown out with the broken rock. Then it becomes a menace to the workmen. It is a favorite practice of men who are waiting or resting to sit on a pile of 'muck,' as the broken rock is called, and to jab into it with a pick or a candlestick or some other steel thing, much the same as a Yankee will whittle while he talks or thinks. If the steel strikes one of these bits of dynamite that has not gone off, because the glycerine in it has started to run or because a fragment of it has been crystalized, there will be an explosion. The chances are that not one out of the group of men sitting around will escape injury.

"Another frequent cause of accidents is that sometimes when the dynamite explodes and tears out the rock a small quantity of it will be left in the bottom of the drill hole, unaffected by the shock. If the drill hole that remains happens to be pointed in the right direction a lazy drill runner is likely to take advantage of it and start his new hole in the old one in order to make a record or save time. The instant his drill commences to thud on the unexploded dynamite it goes off. The steel is driven back through the barrel of the machine, wrecking it and usually killing the drill runner. This explains many mysterious deaths that have been attributed to 'missed shots.' These accidents are more frequent in New York, where more dynamite is used in building operations than anywhere else in the United States, because the men who handle the explosives there are not so well acquainted with its peculiarities as they are in the mining camps."

THE VISION AND THE QUEST

By J. TORREY CONNOR

...out a swirling cloud of sand a man emerged, moving slowly, painfully, and driving before him a burro heavily laden. The spikes of the Spanish bayonet had rent his clothing, and his bruised feet were ill protected by broken shoes, but he did not heed the prick of the thorns nor the hurt of the bruises.

Three men came after him. Two of them were leading pack-animals, and the third, a Mexican, staggering as he walked, bore upon his shoulders the load of the locoed animal they had shot back at the last water-hole.

The trackless waste stretched away to the rolling hills, its level expanse unbroken save by giant cacti—those sentinels of the desert standing eternally on guard above the bleaching bones of hapless victims.

It was hot—hot! The sun, a round, unwinking, malignant eye, glared from a copper-colored sky. The wind that came in little puffs, heaping, leveling, whirling the alkali-dust hither and thither, was like a blast from a furnace.

In the scant shade of the sage-brush and Spanish bayonet lizards panted, and the horned toad sought shelter in vain. The gusts increased in violence, and blinding sand-showers filled the air.

"Mebbe the Professor knows whar he's goin'," said the man at the tail of the procession. He raised his voice to make himself heard. "If he does, why'd he hire us to find his gold-mine fer him, eh, Williams?"

Williams fell back a pace.

"Fer the pleasure o' our sassiety, Watkins. What else?" He grinned through cracked lips.

"Wal, this day's my last. I've had enough o' it. We shouldn't 'a' left the water-hole. Thar's a storm comin' up, an'—"

As if in mockery of his words, a mighty gust of wind nearly swept the four men off their feet. Simultaneously, a writhing column appeared to the left, and in a moment they were enveloped in a stinging cloud of sand that stifled the breath and made speech impossible.

With one accord they dropped to the ground, and lay with heads covered until the force of the storm was spent. The Professor was first upon his feet. He bent over and touched each man in turn on the shoulder.

Watkins, lifting his head, uttered a startled exclamation. Out of the whirling cloud of darkness had grown an evil face, a face that menaced him. He shuddered involuntarily, and then laughed at himself for a fanciful fool, as, with the passing of the blinding gust, the Professor stood revealed.

"I took you fer the Fiend himself," he said, as he rose slowly. "No wonder! In the yaller light, an' with all this sand in my eye, you sure looked somethin' fierce."

"Come!" he insisted. "We must g-go on."

"Oh, senor," the mozo implored, "basta manana! We would rest."

"I ain't goin' a step farther," Watkins doggedly insisted. "The Arizony coyote that'd pick my bones ain't whelped yet. It's me fer the back track. We can make the railroad in four days, an' be in California in a week. Wish I'd never left it to come on this here fool trip."

A strange light flickered in the Professor's eyes. His lean fingers curved inward, like the claws of a bird of prey. He shot one glance at Watkins—a glance that was at once threatening and defiant—and then turned to Williams.

"You will n-not desert m-m-me, Williams? It is only for a f-f-few hours now—a few h-hours!"

"I'll stand by you, Professor."

"And y-you, Pedro?"

"Si, senor."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," Watkins amended, ashamed to find himself the one deserter from the ranks. "We'll camp over thar fer the night, an' in the mornin'— Wal, I'll agree to hold the fort here fer twenty-four hours. Take the camp outfit with you er not, jes' as you like; but you'd better march light. You say it's a few hours' journey now, Professor? All right. If you don't show up by to-morrow night, I'll hit the high places back to the railroad."

With the suddenness characteristic of the comings and goings of desert storms, the wind had subsided, and only by the murky atmosphere could the wanderers have told that the evil genii of the wilderness had passed that way. Presently night fell, and, gathering round the fire of greasewood which the Mexican built, they talked or were silent, by turns. The Professor sat alone, as was his custom.

He was of the Tribe of the Wandering Foot, this man whose infirmity banned him from the companionship of men. He went up and down the land seeking, and ever seeking, that which to him was life itself. In the dust that had been tracked by those a century dead, he sought it. His camp-fires blinked beside many a lonely trail end in solitudes unvisited by human kind.

"I reckon he's plumb foolish," said Watkins in a low tone, with a glance at the leader, who, with a dripping candle-end in his fingers, was poring over a tattered parchment.

"You've got another guess comin'," retorted Williams. "Bein' tongue-tied don't keep his brain from workin' proper, does it?"

"It ain't that. It's this hull blamed business o' huntin' fer a gold-mine whar nobody ever heard tell o' thar bein' gold."

"He didn't let on 'twas a gold-mine. He 'lowed he was after treasure."

"He's after blood, all right!" Watkins snarled. "Did you see the look he give me a while back? It meant murder, er I'm a greaser!"

"Ho!" Williams hooted derisively. "What an onhealthy imagination you must have, Watkins! The Professor? Why, the Professor wouldn't hurt a fly! I went with him onct, when he was follerin' up these here cliff-dwellin' people, an' he was like a lamb fer peaceability the hull time. They do tell, Watkins, that thar was folks a livin' an' cities built here in Ameriky afer Columbus diskivered it."

"They do tell that the moon is made o' green cheese!" Watkins mocked. "What's he sayin'?"

The Professor leaned over and thrust the parchment into Williams' hand.

"You s-see"—he traced the lines with a trembling finger—"the route l-lies there, and there, and t-t-t-there. You will not f-fail me, with the end in s-s-sight? Promise."

And again Williams pledged his word.

"I am not a p-prophet, nor the s-son of a prophet," the Professor went on dreamily, "but I had a vision. It was on the night after the p-parchment came into my possession." The Professor's eyes had in them the look of one who sees things unseen of other men. "Did you ever hear of t-t-the Seven Cities of Cibola, Williams?"

Williams scratched his head reflectively.

"What railroad be they on, Professor?"

"You d-don't understand? No m-matter. This is what I s-saw in my v-vision: I t-thought I was w-wandering in an accursed p-place that God had m-made in His anger. I c-came to a ravine, with a s-small s-stream trickling along t-the bottom of it. I s-stood above, on the brink of t-t-t-the ravine.

"S-suddenly I noted, on t-the opposite s-s-side, a f-flight of stone s-steps, cut in t-the solid rock, and there w-w-were endless processions of n-naked, bleeding slaves, chained together, g-g-going up and c-coming down the s-steps. Where the f-f-flight ended at t-the top, a huge rock, roughly carved in the f-f-form of a sphinx, s-stood guard at the mouth of a c-cavern.

"As I w-watched the cowering f-figures, scourged by the m-m-masters' whips, it s-seemed to me that the slaves were c-c-conveying treasure t-to the cavern. Those who w-went up c-carried burdens, while those who c-came down were empty-handed."

The Professor's voice trailed off. He gazed fixedly into the darkness.

"We'll go after that ravine first thing in the mornin', Professor," Williams cheerfully assured him.

"Plumb foolish!" Watkins reiterated, as he settled himself in his blanket for the night.

The sun rose in a conflagration of red and gold. The Professor's impatience would hardly brook the delay necessary to the preparation of the morning meal, and that despatched, he insisted upon setting out at once.

The three turned their faces toward the hills. The camp was soon left far behind. The country changed and became more broken; the ground, ridged with sharp, black rocks, rising to knolls and dipping to hollows.

A heat-mist rolled from the earth in waves. The distant hills, as seen through the haze, were blurred in outline and indistinct. The Mexican, wiping the sweat from his eyes, trudged on uncomplainingly, but Williams called a halt.

"Ain't thar some other way 'round, Professor? These stones hurt my feet, an'—"

He stopped and stared at the Professor with seven-league strides that carried him forward rapidly.

The sunburned hills appeared to be no nearer, although for an hour the men kept on across the country as the crow flies. The Professor muttered incessantly and unintelligibly. Williams could only hope that he would tire of the fruitless search and turn back of his own accord.

Then, all in a moment, they were there, standing on the brink of a barranca that, in some volcanic action, had opened—a deep, narrow slit in the ground.

"Do you s-see it?" the Professor cried, pointing down and across the ravine to where, midway between top and foot and showing black in the wall of rock, the mouth of a cavern yawned beneath an overhanging rock. "Do you see it?" he cried again, a shrill note of triumph in his voice.

And Williams, his eyes widening with wonder, saw it all, as the Professor had seen it in his vision. There were the cave, the guarding rock, roughly shaped in the form of a sphinx—whether by nature or by the hand of man could not be determined at that distance—and leading from the mouth of the cave a rude flight of stone steps that descended by turns and angles to the floor of the barranca.

"At last! At last!" The Professor's voice rose to a shriek. "After all these years! Success! After sages have groped in vain! Success! Oh, that I should be the one to find the way! I! Success! Success! Success!"

Williams momentarily forgot the cause of the Professor's jubilation. Gazing into the man's twitching face, watching, as if fascinated, the writhing of the lean fingers as they plucked and tore at the handkerchief knotted about the skinny throat, he could only grasp the one astonishing fact: The Professor's halting tongue had given utterance to unhalting speech!

Wondering still, he submitted passively when the Professor, laying hold of him, dragged him hither and thither in search of a place where they might attempt the descent in safety.

Thus occupied, the Professor did not perceive that which Williams, scarcely crediting the evidence of his own eyes, saw—the toppling of bushes that stood on the opposite and higher bank, the rattling shower of earth and stones that preceded the dislodgment of the rock which kept guard at the cavern's mouth, the trembling of the ground underfoot.

The Professor had espied a pathway where the outcropping of volcanic rock promised a foothold. He turned to the mozo, who, after the manner of his kind, ever followed the leader unquestioningly.

"Come!" he shouted.

But the man, his eyes distended with fear, was tracing the course of a fissure that suddenly had split the ground, separating him from his companions.

"No!" the frightened man protested. He dropped on his knees, crossing himself and calling on his patron saint. "El temblor, senor, el temblor!"

Even as he cried out, the ground under their feet undulated as the waves of the sea. Roused to their danger, the Professor held out his hand to Williams. Together they leaped the widening fissure, and staggering, stumbling like drunken men, gained the solid ground.

As they reached the Mexican's side and faced about, the earth crumbled before their eyes, a huge mass of rock and earth sliding with a muffled roar into the depths of the ravine. Again was felt the undulating motion, so sudden, so violent, that they were thrown on their faces.

After a time the men who had so narrowly escaped death struggled to their feet and stared at each other with blanched faces. Then, in a moment, it all came back to the Professor—the vision and the quest. He remembered why he was there.

"We must get out o' this!" cried Williams, laying his hand on the Professor's shoulder. But the Professor was gazing straight over Williams's head—gazing with an awful look in his eyes at—what?

Involuntarily Williams sent his glance in the same direction. The gaping mouth of the cave no longer showed black against the wall of rock. Buried under thousands of tons of earth that had filled the barranca almost level full, the cavern, the guarding sphinx, and the steps of stone were lost to view.

Williams's glance traveled back to the Professor's face. What he saw caused him to utter an exclamation. It was as if some long-dormant strain of savagery had suddenly changed the gentle, scholarly man of Williams's knowledge to something less than human.

He was terrible in this the hour of his defeat. His yellow teeth were bared, fang-like, in a grimace of rage. Under the bristling gray eyebrows the eyes burned with a light that menaced reason.

As Williams gazed at the distorted visage, the gleam in the Professor's eyes went out as would a candle-flame in a whiff of wind. He sank to the ground, all strength gone from him, and passed his hand across his forehead in a bewildered fashion.

"The v-very sign!" he mumbled. "I did not s-show you the other p-p-parchment. See, here it is, t-the outline of the s-sphinx."

As Williams stooped to help the Professor to his feet, the glint of yellow metal caught his eye. In an instant he was on his knees, digging into the loosened earth with his bare hands. The Mexican, roused to action, joined him, and the two toiled silently, breathlessly.

Presently Williams sprang to his feet, and seizing the Professor's shoulder, shook him roughly.

"It's thar, Professor!" he shouted into the other's inattentive ear. "Gold! Gold! Gold! Enough to make us all rich as kings! Don't you sabe? The gold is thar!"

"It was not to be, Williams! It w-was n-n-not to be! All m-m-m-my life I have b-been willing t-to deny myself anything, everything, t-t-to g-gain the end in v-view. Why, I w-would have starved and died happy, if the w-w-work that lives after the workman—my w-work—had been d-done.

"Williams, here it w-was that the S-seven Cities of Cibola once s-s-stood, and down there—d-down there in t-that cavern—are t-t-tablets, graven with a p-people's history. That I should have failed! T-that I should have f-failed with s-s-success in s-sight!"

"It is the heat, No?" said the Mexican. "The senor is muy loco. No?"

The professor thrust the parchment into Williams' hand.

THE FUR STOLE

BY EDGAR JEPSON

The Twins were feeding the kittens of the Cats' Home, founded and supported by their enthusiastic, cat-loving Aunt Amelia, from which they had drawn bicycles and, as superintendents, were drawing pocket-money. The kittens were indulging in a few last engaging gambols before falling into the sleep of repletion which always followed their meals. But the Twins watched them with unsmiling eyes, for graver matters than the gambols of kittens filled their minds.

The face of the Terror was nearly always grave, for an ineffable serenity dwelt on it. But to-day the piquant, vivacious face of Erebus was grave also: Christmas was at hand; and the matter of a Christmas present for their Mother weighed on their minds. They had saved up nine shillings; a large sum; one that must be expended with judgment. It was their desire to give her something both attractive and useful.

They were in doubt whether it should be a hair-brush, or a tortoise-shell comb, to set in her hair, when Erebus frowning thoughtfully said, "I know what she really wants, though."

"What's that?" said the Terror sharply.

"It's one of those fur stoles in the window of Battam's at Rowington," said Erebus. "I heard her sigh when she looked at it. She used to have beautiful furs once—before Father was lost. But she sold them—to get things for us, I suppose. Uncle Maurice told me so—at least I got it out of him."

The Terror was now frowning thoughtfully too; and he said in a tone of decision, "How much is that stole?"

"Oh, it's no good thinking about it; it's three guineas," said Erebus quickly.

"That's a mort o' money, as old Stubbs says," said the Terror; and the frown deepened on his brow.

"I wonder if we could get it?" said Erebus; and a faint hopefulness dawned in her eyes as she looked at his pondering face. "I should like to. It must be hard on Mum not to have nice things—much harder than for us because we've never had them—at least we had them when we were small; but we never got used to them. So we've forgotten."

"No; we're all right as long as we have useful things," said the Terror without relaxing his thoughtful frown. "But you're right about Mum; she must be different. I've got to think this out."

"Oh, but you've never thought of as much as three guineas!" cried Erebus.

"I thought of thirty pounds once—for this Cats' Home and our bicycles," said the Terror firmly. "And if you come to think of it, Mum's stole is really more important than these things—though not so useful."

"But it's different: we had to have bicycles—you said so," said Erebus.

"Well, we've got to have this stole," said the Terror in a tone of finality; and the matter settled, his brow smoothed to its wonted serenity.

"But how?" said Erebus eagerly.

"Things will occur to us. They always do," said the Terror with a careless confidence.

They began to put the kittens into their hutches. Half-way through the operation the Terror paused and said: "I wonder if we could sell any of these kittens. Does anyone ever buy kittens?"

"We did: we gave threepence each for these," said Erebus.

"Ah, but we had to have something in the way of cats in the Home. We should never have bought a kitten but for that."

"I should buy kittens, if I were rich and hadn't got any," said Erebus firmly.

"You would, would you? That's what I wanted to know: girls will buy kittens," said the Terror in a tone of satisfaction. "Well, we'll sell these."

"But we can't empty the Home," said Erebus.

"We wouldn't. We'd buy fresh ones, just able to lap, for threepence each and sell these at a shilling. We might make nearly a sovereign that way."

"You do think of things," said Erebus with some envy.

It was not the habit of the Twins to lose time: they put away the kittens, took their bicycles, rode down to the village, and spread the news that they were once more prepared to buy kittens at threepence each. On their way home they met Tom Cobb. Tom Cobb was a villager they respected; and he and they were very good friends. Carping souls often said that Tom Cobb had never done an honest day's work in his life. Yet he was the smartest man in the village, the most neatly dressed, always with money in his pocket. It was common knowledge that his fortunate state arose from his constitutional disability to observe those admirable laws which have been passed for the protection of English pheasants from all dangers save the small shot of those who have them fed. Tom Cobb waged war, a war of varying fortunes, against the Sacred Bird. Sometimes for a whole season he would sell the victims of the carnage of that war with never a check to his ardor. In another season some prying gamekeeper would surprise him glutting his thirst for blood and gold; and an infuriated Bench of Magistrates would fine him. The fine was always paid. Tom Cobb was one of those thrifty souls who lay up money against a rainy day.

He and the Twins greeted one another with smiles of mutual respect; and at the sight of him a sudden light, the light of inspiration, illumined the Terror's face. He slipped off his bicycle and said:

"I've been wondering if you'd do me a favor, Tom. I've always wanted to know how to make a snare. I'll give you half-a-crown if you'll teach me."

Tom Cobb's clear blue eyes sparkled at the thought of half-a-crown; but he hesitated. He knew the Twins, he knew that with them a little knowledge was a dangerous thing—for others. He foresaw trouble for the Sacred Bird: he foresaw trouble for his natural foes, the gamekeepers. He did not foresee trouble for the Twins; he knew them. And very distinctly he saw half-a-crown.

He grinned and said slowly, "Yes, Master Terror. I'll be very 'appy to teach you 'ow to make a snare."

"Thank you. I'll come round to-morrow morning," said the Terror gratefully.

"It will be nice to know how to make snares!" cried Erebus happily as they rode on. "I wonder we never thought of it before."

"We didn't want a fur stole before," said the Terror.

"But where's the half-crown coming from?" said Erebus.

"Out of the nine shillings we've saved," said the Terror. "We shall have to spend some of it to make more."

The next morning Erebus in vain entreated the Terror to take her with him to Tom Cobb's cottage to share the lesson in the art of making snares. The Terror would not; often he was indulgent; often he was firm. To-day he was firm.

He returned from his lesson with a serene face; but he said rather sadly, "I've still a lot to learn."

That afternoon the Twins rode into Rowington. First the Terror bought copper wire at the ironmonger's; and he was insistent that it should be of a certain thickness. Then he went into the market-place to a stall which was kept by their retired nurse Ellen, who was now the industrious wife of a small farmer.

To her he broached the matter of the sale of kittens. Ellen, whose mind was firmly fixed in the grooves of butter and eggs and poultry, laughed contumedly at the suggestion that anyone would want to buy kittens. But the Terror was unmoved by her incredulity; and talked to her patiently until he persuaded her at any rate to try to sell kittens for them. She agreed, for most women found it difficult to resist him when he had set his mind on their doing something for him; and she was always eager to oblige him. But she held out no hopes of success.

On their return home the Twins selected six kittens for the experiment: and much to the surprise and disgust of those kittens, they washed them. They dried them in the kitchen, and let them sleep that night in its warmth. After the washing of the kittens, they betook themselves to the making of snares. Erebus, ever sanguine, supposed that they would make snares at once. The Terror had no such expectations; and it was a long while before he got one to his liking. Remembering Tom Cobb's instructions, he washed it, and then put on gloves and set it in the hole in the hedge through which the rabbits from the Common were wont to enter their garden to eat the cabbages. He was up betimes next morning, found a rabbit in the snare, and thrilled with joy. The Fur Stole had come within the range of possibility.

After breakfast they made the toilet of the six chosen kittens: and Erebus adorned the neck of each of them with a bow of blue ribbon. Knowing the ways of kittens she sewed on the bows and sewed them on firmly. It could not be doubted that they looked much finer than ordinary, unwashed kittens. They put three in the basket of both of their bicycles, rode over to Rowington, and handed them over to Ellen. They would have liked to see what success she had: but those were full days; and they had other things to do. Among other things they made three snares; and the Terror found that the fingers of Erebus were, if anything, more deft at snare-making than his own. In the afternoon they rode over to Rowington again, and when they came to Ellen's stall, they found the kitten-basket empty.

Ellen greeted them with a large, shining smile and said: "Well, Master Terror, you were right and I was wrong. I've sold them kitties—every one; and I've had two more ordered. It was when the ladies from the Hill came marketing that they went."

She opened her purse, took out six shillings, and held them out to the Terror.

"Five," said the Terror. "I must pay you a shilling for selling them. It's what they call commission."

"No, sir; I don't want any commission," said Ellen firmly. "As long as those kitties were there, I sold more butter and eggs and fowls than anyone else in the market. I haven't had such a good day not ever before."

The Terror pressed her to accept the shilling; but she remained firm. The Twins rode joyfully home with six shillings.

That night the Terror set his four snares in the hedge of the garden and about the common. He caught three rabbits.

The next morning he was silent and very thoughtful as he helped feed the kittens and changed the hay in the hutches.

At last he said rather sadly, "It's sometimes rather awkward being a Dangerfield."

"Why?" said Erebus, surprised.

"Those rabbits," said the Terror. "I want to sell them; but it's no good going into Rowington and trying to sell them to a poulterer. Even if he wanted rabbits, which he mightn't, he'd only give me sixpence each for them. But if I were to sell them myself here, I could get eightpence, or perhaps ninepence, each for them. But, you see, a Dangerfield can't sell things. Uncle Maurice said I had the makings of a millionaire in me, but a Dangerfield couldn't go into business. It's the family tradition not to. That's what he said."

"THE KEEPER'S GOT HIM. THIS IS A MESS!"

"Perhaps he was only rotting," said Erebus hopefully.

"No; he wasn't. I asked Mum; and she said it was the family tradition, too. I expect that's why we're all so hard-up."

"But the Squire sells things," said Erebus quickly. "He sells a lot of his game. And you can't say he isn't a gentleman, though the Anstruthers aren't as old as the Dangerfields."

"Of course he does," said the Terror in a tone of great relief. "We can easily count rabbits as game."

Forthwith they took their bicycles and the four rabbits, and set out on tour through the neighborhood. The Terror went to the backdoors of their well-to-do neighbors and broached the matter of rabbits to their cooks. In three-quarters of an hour he had sold the four rabbits for eightpence each. They were pleased indeed; the Fur Stole was moving towards them. Deducting expenses, they had fourteen and tuppence out of the sixty-three shillings.

It was sometimes said of the Twins that they never knew when to stop; but in this case it was not their fault that they went on. It was the fault of the rabbit-market: at the fourteenth rabbit, when they had but twenty-one and sixpence towards the stole, the bottom fell out of it. For the time the desire of Little Deeping to eat rabbits was sated.

It was also the fault of the cook of Mrs. Blenkinsop, who said, "Now, if you was to bring me a nice fat pheasant twice a week, it would be a very different thing, Master Dangerfield."

The Terror looked at her thoughtfully, then he said, "And how much would you pay me for pheasants?"

The cook made a silent appeal to those processes of mental arithmetic she had learned in her village school, saw her profit, and said, "Half-a-crown, sir."

"All right; I'll bring you two a week," said the Terror firmly.

When he revealed to Erebus his vision of the new Eldorado, she said, "But where are you going to get pheasants from?"

"Woods," said the Terror, embracing the horizon in a sweeping gesture.

Erebus looked round the horizon with greedy eyes; they sparkled fiercely.

"But we don't know nearly enough about it, said the Terror thoughtfully. "I think we ought to talk to Wiggins's father. He knows a lot of useful things as well as Higher Mathematics. But we'd better not let him see we're trying to get anything out of him."

For the next three days they rode forth with the intention of coming upon Mr. Carrington by seeming accident; but it was not till the third day that they came upon him and their young friend, Wiggins, walking briskly, about three miles from Little Deeping. The Twins, as a rule, were wont to shun Mr. Carrington. They had a great respect for his attainments, but a much greater for his humor. In Erebus this respect often took the form of wriggling in his presence. She did not know what he might say next. He was therefore somewhat surprised when they slipped off their bicycles, and joined him. He wondered what they wanted.

Apparently, they were merely in a gregarious mood, yearning for the society of their fellow-creatures; but in about three minutes the talk was running on pheasants. Mr. Carrington did not like pheasants except from the point of view of eating; and he dwelt at length on the devastation the Sacred Bird was working in the English countryside: villages were being emptied and let fall to ruin that it might live undisturbed; the song birds were being killed off to give it the woods to itself.

It seemed but a natural step from the pheasant to the poacher; he was not aware that he took it at the prompting of the Terror; and he bewailed the degeneracy of the English rustic, his slow reversion to the type of neolithic man, owing to the fact that the Squires drained the villages of all the intelligent. The skilful poacher who harried the Sacred Bird was fast becoming extinct.

Then at last he came to the important matter of the wiles of the poacher; and the thirsty ears of the Terror drank in his golden words. He discussed the methods of the gang of poachers and the single poacher with intelligent relish and more sympathy than was perhaps wise to display in the presence of the young. The Terror came from that talk with a firm belief in the efficacy of raisins.

The next morning six kittens, washed, brushed, and beautiful, were carried to the faithful Ellen; and in the afternoon the Twins again rode into Rowington and returned with another six shillings. They did not come straight home. In the bicycle-basket of the Terror was a pound of raisins; three miles out of Rowington was a small clump of trees on a hill. At the foot of the hill a hundred yards below the clump lay Great Deeping Wood, acre upon acre. It had lately passed, along with the rest of the Great Deeping estate, into the hands of Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer, a pudding-faced, but staunch, young Briton of the old Pomeranian strain. He was not loved in the county, even by landed proprietors of less modern stocks, for though he cherished the laudable ambition of having the finest pheasant shoot in England, and was on the way to realize it, he did not invite his neighbors to help shoot them. His friends came wholly from the Polite World which so adorns the Illustrated Weeklies. It was in the deep December dusk that the Twins came to the clump on the hill. The Terror lifted their bicycles over the gate and set them behind the hedge. Leaving Erebus to keep watch, he stole down the hedge to the clump, crawled through a gap into it, and walked through it. One pheasant scuttled out of it, down the hedge-row to the wood below. The occurrence pleased him. He crawled out of the clump on the farther side, and proceeded to lay a train of raisins down the ditch of the hedge to the wood. He did not lay it right down to the wood lest some inquisitive gamekeeper might espy it. Then he returned with fine, red-Indian caution, to Erebus. They rode home well content. Next evening with another bag of raisins, they sought the clump again. Again the Terror laid a trail of raisins along the ditch from the wood to the clump. But this evening he set a snare in the hedge of the clump just about the end of the ditch. The next evening he took from that snare a plump, but Sacred, bird. Half an hour later he sold it to the cook of Mrs. Blenkinsop for half-a-crown.

The next day he made a careful exploration of the clump at the hour when game-keepers eat their dinner, and set two snares in manifest pheasant-runs. The next evening he sold a pheasant to the cook of Mrs. Blenkinsop and another to the cook of Mr. Carrington. He saw no need to tell either of them not to tell anyone that he was the vendor. Pheasants at half-a-crown each are not so easily come by that one talks about them.

Encouraged by success and seven and sixpence, the Terror found other likely places in which to set snares. He found none so good as the clump on the hill; but they served. Pheasants flowed in: and Fur Stole came nearer and nearer.

Then came trouble; and it came from a snare in the corner of Great Deeping Wood. The Twins and their young friend Wiggins were riding along the road which cuts the wood in half early in the afternoon; and it occurred to the Terror that instead of waiting for the favoring dusk, he might as well examine the snare then and save himself another journey. It was a risk no experienced poacher would have taken; but old heads, alas! do not grow on young shoulders. Erebus rode on up the road to keep a look-out ahead. The Terror slipped off his bicycle and so did Wiggins. Wiggins held the two bicycles. The Terror listened. The wood was very still in its winter silence. He slipped through the hedge into it and presently came back bringing with him a very nice young pheasant indeed. He put it into the basket of his bicycle, and mounted. They had barely started when a keeper sprang out of the hedge forty yards ahead, and came running towards them. There was neither room nor time to run. They rode on; and the keeper made for the Terror. The Terror swerved; and the keeper swerved. Wiggins ran bang into the keeper; and they came to the ground together as the Terror shot ahead as hard as he could go.

He caught up with Erebus; and his cry of "Keeper!" set her racing beside him; but both of them kept looking back for Wiggins; and presently, when no Wiggins appeared, with one accord they slowed down and stopped.

"The keeper's got him. This is a mess!" said the Terror, panting a little from their spurt.

"If only it had been one of us!" cried Erebus. "Whatever are we to do?"

"If that beastly keeper hadn't seen me with the pheasant, I'd have got him away somehow," said the Terror. "But, as it is, it's me they really want; and I'd get fined to a dead certainty. Come on, let's go back and see what's happened to him. You scout on ahead."

"All right," said Erebus mounting.

She rode back through the wood slowly, her keen eyes straining for a sign of an ambush. The Terror followed her at a distance of sixty yards, ready to jump off, turn his machine, and fly, should she give the alarm. They got no sight of Wiggins till they came, just beyond the end of the wood, to the lodges of Deeping Park; then, half-way up the drive, they saw the keeper and his prey. The keeper held Wiggins with his left hand and wheeled the captured bicycle with his right. The Twins dismounted. Even at that distance they could see the deep dejection of their friend.

"There's not really any reason for him to be frightened," said the Terror more calmly. "He was never in the wood; and he never touched the pheasant."

"But he will be frightened; he'll be frightened out of his life; he's so young," said Erebus in a tone of extreme distress, gazing with acute anxiety after their receding friend. "He's not like us; he won't cheek the keeper all the way like I should."

"Oh, Wiggins has plenty of pluck," said the Terror in a reassuring tone.

"But he won't understand he's all right. He's only ten. And there's no saying how that beastly foreigner who shoots nightingales will bully him," cried Erebus with unabated anxiety.

"Well, the sooner we go and fetch his father the sooner he'll be out of it," said the Terror, making as if to mount his bicycle.

"No, no!" cried Erebus almost fiercely. "That won't do at all! We've got to rescue him now! And you've got to find a way!"

The Terror frowned, and took off his cap to wrestle more manfully with the problem.

Then he said in the gloomiest tone, "I can't see what we can do."

"Oh, I'm going to get him out of this somehow!" cried Erebus desperately; and she sprang on her machine and rode up the drive.

The Terror half mounted, and stopped at the thought that he was the only one in real danger. He ground his teeth: for all his flawless serenity inaction was repugnant to him.

The bicycle of Wiggins stood against one of the pillars of the porch. She dismounted and stood considering for perhaps half a minute; then she moved his bicycle so that it was right to his hand if he came out, set her own bicycle against another of the pillars, but out of sight lest he should take it by mistake, walked up the steps, hammered the knocker firmly, and rang the bell. The moment the door opened she stepped quickly past the footman into the hall. The keeper sat on a chair facing her: and on the chair beside him sat Wiggins, looking very white and woebegone.

"What are you doing with my little brother?" said Erebus sharply, adopting Wiggins to strengthen her position.

The keeper opened his eyes and said in a tone of some triumph, "I caught 'im poachin'——"

"Stand up! What do you mean by speaking to me, sitting down?" said Erebus in her most imperative tone.

The keeper stood up with uncommon quickness and a sudden sheepish air: "'E was poachin,'" he said sulkily.

"He was not! A little boy like that!" cried Erebus scornfully.

"Anyways 'e was a aidin' an' abettin' an' I've brought 'im to Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer an' it's for 'im to say," said the keeper stubbornly.

There came a faint click from the beautiful lips of Erebus, the gentle click by which the Twins called one another to attention. At the sound Wiggins, his face faintly flushed with hope, braced himself. Erebus measured the distance with the eye of an expert, just as there came into the farther end of the hall that large, flabby, pudding-faced young Pomeranian Briton, Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer.

"Where's the poacher?" he said in an eager, angry voice, resorting in his motion to the ancestral "h."

As the keeper turned to him Erebus sprang to the door and threw it wide.

"Bolt, Wiggins!" she cried.

Wiggins bolted for the door; the keeper grabbed at him and missed; the footman grabbed and grabbed the interposing Erebus. She slammed the door behind the vanished Wiggins.

Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer dashed heavily down the hall with a thick howl. Erebus backed against the door. He caught her by the left arm to swing her out of his way. It was a silly arm to choose, for she caught him a slap on his Pomeranian expanse of cheek with the full swing of her right, a slap which rang through the great hall like the crack of a whip-lash. Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer was large but tender. He howled again, and thumped at Erebus with big flabby fists. She caught the first blow on an uncommonly acute elbow. The second never fell, for the footman caught him by the collar and swung him round.

"It's not for the likes of you to hit English young ladies!" he said with patriotic indignation.

Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer gasped and gurgled; then he howled furiously, "Get out of my house! Now—at once—get out!"

"Yes, sir—very pleased to go, sir—when I've had my wages. It's a month ago to-morrow since I give notice anyhow, sir," said the footman with a cold exultation.

Erebus waited to hear no more. She drew back the latch, slipped through the door, and slammed it behind her. A big motor car stood at the bottom of the steps. She sprang on her bicycle and raced down the drive.

"I've sent Wiggins on!" he shouted as she sped past him.

"Come on! That beastly foreigner's motor car was ready to start!" she cried.

They caught Wiggins up a mile down the road; and the three of them sat down to ride all they knew. They were a good eight miles from home; and the car could go three miles to their one on that good road. The Twins alone would have made a longer race of it; but the pace was set by Wiggins. They had gone little more than three miles when they heard the honk of the car as it came round a corner half a mile behind them.

"Go on, Terror!" cried Erebus. "You're the one that matters! You did the poaching! I'll look after Wiggins! He'll be all right with me!"

For perhaps fifty yards the Terror hesitated; then the wisdom of the advice sank in, and he shot ahead. Erebus kept behind Wiggins and they rode on. The car was overhauling them rapidly, but not nearly so rapidly as it would have done had not Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer, who lacked the courage of his famous grenadier ancestors, been in it. At the end of mile and a half it was less than fifty yards behind them; and then a figure came into sight swinging briskly along.

"It's your father!" gasped Erebus.

It was indeed the Higher Mathematician.

He showed, and indeed felt, no surprise at the sudden appearance of his panting offspring, pursued by a Pomeranian Briton in a motor car, since that panting offspring was accompanied by Erebus.

As they reached him, they flung themselves off their bicycles; and Erebus had only time to cry, "Wiggins hasn't been poaching! It was the Terror!" when the car was on them.

It drew up with all its brakes jarring: and Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer tumbled out of it.

"I've got you! you little devil!" he bellowed, quite incorrectly; and he rushed at Wiggins who discreetly stepped behind his father.

Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer made to thrust Mr. Carrington out of his way with splendid violence. Mr. Carrington stepped lightly back, and then forward; and there befell Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer what, in the technical terms affected by the Fancy, is described as "an uppercut on the point which put him to sleep."

He fell as falls a sack of potatoes, and lay like a log.

The keeper had disengaged himself from the car, and hurried forward.

"Do you want some too, my good man?" said Mr. Carrington in his most agreeable tone, keeping his guard rather low.

The keeper stopped short and looked earnestly, with undissembled satisfaction, at his stricken employer.

"I can't say as I do, sir," he said civilly.

"Then perhaps you'll be good enough to tell me the name of this hulking young blackguard who assaults quiet, elderly gentlemen, taking constitutionals, in the most unprovoked and wanton fashion," said the Higher Mathematician in the same agreeable tone.

"It's Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer of Great Deeping Court," said the keeper, respectfully.

"Then tell Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer, when he recovers the few wits he looks to have, with my compliments, that he will sometime this evening be summoned for assault. Good-afternoon," said Mr. Carrington; and he turned on his heel.

Erebus and Wiggins walked beside him wheeling their bicycles, in a hushed, solemn, yet gratified tone, Erebus said:

"Have you killed him?"

"No, my child; I am not a pork butcher," said Mr. Carrington amiably. "In about twenty minutes the young man will come to himself. Let us hope that it will be a better and a wiser self. But what was it all about?"

Erebus looked round the horizon for inspiration; then she said, with commendable glibness, "It was a pheasant in Great Deeping Wood. The Terror found it, I suppose. I had gone on, and I didn't see that part. But it was Wiggins the keeper caught."

"We had better have that part clear. What happened exactly, Rupert?" said Mr. Carrington.

"The Terror found the pheasant and put it in his bicycle-basket. And we had just got on our bicycles when the keeper came out of the wood, and I ran into him; and he collared me and took me up to the Court. I wasn't really frightened—at least not much," said the artless Wiggins.

"The keeper had no right to touch him," said Erebus glibly. "Wiggins never touched the pheasant; he didn't even go into the wood; and when I went into the hall, the hall of the Court, I found him and the keeper sitting there, and I let Wiggins out of course; and then that horrid Mr. Rosenheimer who shoots nightingales caught hold of me by the arm ever so roughly, and I slapped him just once. I should think that the mark is there still (her speed of speech slackened to a slower, vengeful gratification and then quickened again), and he began to thump me and the footman interfered, and I came away, and they came after us in the motor car, and you saw what happened—at least you did it."

She stopped somewhat breathless.

"Lucidity itself," said Mr. Carrington. "But let us have the matter of the pheasant clear. Was the Terror exploring the wood on the chance of finding a pheasant, or had he reason to expect that a pheasant would be there ready to be brought home?"

Erebus blushed faintly, looked round the horizon somewhat aimlessly, and said, "Well, there was a snare, you know."

Mr. Carrington chuckled: "I thought so," he said. "And did you know of that snare, Rupert?"

"Oh, no: he didn't know anything about it!" Erebus broke in quickly. "We should never have thought of letting him into anything so dangerous! He's so young!"

"I shall be eleven in a fortnight!" said Wiggins with some heat.

"You see, we wanted a fur stole at Battam's in Rowington for a Christmas present for mother; and pheasants were the only way," Erebus explained.

"Light! Light at last!" said the Higher Mathematician, laughing gently. "Well, everyone has been assaulted except the poacher. Exquisitely Pomeranian! But it's just as well, or that ingenious brother of yours would be in a fine mess. As it is I think we can teach the young Pomeranian not to be so high-spirited." He chuckled again.

He turned off to Muttle Deeping; and before he reached the house of Mr. Tupping, the lawyer, he had drawn from Erebus the whole story of their poaching. He was therefore able to lay the whole case before Mr. Tupping: and since the lawyer not only shared the general dislike of Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer, but was also the friend and legal adviser of Mrs. Dangerfield, he could not have laid it before a more sympathetic man.

The result of their council was that no later than seven o'clock that evening, Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer was served by the Constable of Little Deeping with a Summons for an assault on Miss Violet Anastasia Dangerfield, and with another Summons for an assault on Bertram Carrington, F. R. S., and in the course of the next twenty minutes his keeper was served with a Summons for an assault on Master Rupert Carrington.

Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer was in a chastened, shaken mood, owing to the fact that he had been "put to sleep by an uppercut on the point." He made haste to despatch a car into Rowington to bring the lawyer who managed his local business.

The lawyer knew his client's unpopularity in the County, and advised him earnestly to try to hush these matters up. He declared that however Pomeranian one might be by extraction and in spirit, no bench of English Magistrates would take a favorable view of an assault by a big young man on a middle-aged Higher Mathematician of European reputation, or on Miss Violet Anastasia Dangerfield, aged 13, gallantly rescuing that Higher Mathematician's little boy from wrongful arrest and detention.

Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer held his aching head with both hands, protested that they had done all the effective assaulting, and protested his devotion to the Sacred Bird beloved of the English Magistracy. But he perceived clearly enough that he had let that devotion carry him too far, and that a Bench which never profited by it so far as to shoot the particular Sacred Birds on which it was lavished, would not be deeply touched by it. Therefore he instructed the lawyer to use every effort to settle the matter out of Court.

Since in the background, behind the three assaults, there lurked the Terror with a veritable poached pheasant, the lawyer was not called upon to strain himself. Mr. Carrington settled the matter out of Court. Great Deeping Cottage Hospital became richer by a hundred guineas of Mr. D'Arcy Rosenheimer's Anglo-Pomeranian gold; and the danger which had menaced the courageously collected money of the Twins was averted.

The Terror gave the Sacred Bird a rest; but three hares, culled from the pastures of their old enemy, Farmer Stubbs, made up the sixty-three shillings for the Fur Stole. At the very last moment, in spite of the fact that it was the heart-warming season, the Terror, contrary to every tradition of that old-time establishment, wrung from Battam's Emporium five per cent. discount for cash.

WHEAT ABOVE DOLLAR MARK

BUTTER AND EGGS

Wheat took another jump today, the second of this week. The local quotation Monday was $1.00. Today it advanced to $1.02, which is the highest price reached for months. The advance is due to the continued receipt of discouraging news regarding the growing crop. Other cereals remain at the quotation given for the last few days, although corn sells on the streets frequently at higher figures.

Butter and eggs are remaining pretty firm, there being but comparatively little change. The receipts of eggs have increased one-half over the receipts of several days ago, yet there is no decline in prices and probably will not be this week. It is expected that butter will keep up until good pasture is here. Mr. Hall, manager of the firm of Beyer Bros. company, says butter prices will remain up all through this month and into May.

Flour, in sympathy with the advancing price of wheat, has also gone up a notch on different grades. The figures are given in the quotations of our mills.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago Market.

Chicago, Ill., April 16.—For the first time in nearly a week the wheat market today approached a normal condition. Opening prices varied from 1c lower to ⅝@¾c advance. July started at $1.06 to $1.05¾, rose to $1.07 and reacted to $1.06½.

Indiana sent word of whole farms of 500 and 600 acres being ploughed under. Accordingly, the market tightened, but profit taking led to a setback. The close was easy with July ½c net higher at $1.06½. May finishing ¾c down at $1.10⅝.

Corn gave plain evidence of a lack of support. July opened at 76½c to 75¾c, rallied to 77⅛c and then fell back to 76¾c.

Reports of starch and glucose works shutting down reduced the courage of the bulls. Feeling at the end of the session was weak at 75@75⅛c for July, a decline of 1¾@1¼c net.

Oats—turned weak on account of heavy sales, due to talk of acreage being greatly increased. July started at 53½c, touched 54c and dropped to 53¾c.

In provisions, firmness at the outset was not maintained, pressure from packers, added to the depression in grain forming too much of a burden. Initial transactions ranged from 2½c lower to 7½c gain, with September delivery $18.47½ for pork, $10.70 to $10.72½ for lard and $10.50 for ribs.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

The Day on Wall Street.

New York, April 16.—The common shares of the International Mercantile Marine company were down a point at the opening of today's stock market, with a loss of 2½ points in the preferred and 2 points in the 4½ per cent bonds. The movement otherwise was decidedly irregular with gains and losses quite evenly balanced.

The list became unsettled in the second hour, the undertone denoting a mixture of liquidation for profits and bear selling. All early gains were wiped out and prices in many cases were under yesterday's close. Bonds were steady.

The market closed steady; buying by the bears who make it a rule to close out their contracts each day gave the market an upward impulse, which was accentuated when the rise did not invite fresh selling. Recoveries of a point or more were common in the active shares, and the list showed a better undercurrent of steadiness than had been looked for in view of the day's developments.

MUCH ANXIETY AT WHITE HOUSE

President is Deeply Concerned Over Fate of Major Butt.

YET CLINGS TO HOPE

Washington, April 16.—The white house was not a cheerful place today for President Taft and most of his cabinet and many of the callers were deeply concerned over the probable fate of Maj. A. W. Butt, who has been Mr. Taft's military aide since he entered the white house.

"The chance is a slim one, but we're holding on to that," the president said to a friend as he left for lunch.

All of Major Butts' friends believed he would be among the last to leave the ship.

House Passes Resolutions.

The house of representatives unanimously adopted a resolution today extending sympathy to the relatives of those who met their death in the disaster of the Titanic.

The chaplains of both houses of congress mentioned the Titanic disaster in their invocations today. Chaplain Pierce in the senate referred to the "distress of our people and the sad fate that has overtaken our brethren on the great deep" and asked divine comfort. Chaplain Couden in the house prayed for more stringent laws for the protection of travelers by land or seas as well as for those exposed to fire and flood.

Ask for Quick Report.

A quick report from the White Star line on the number of lifeboats and life rafts carried by the Titanic has been telegraphed for by Supervising Inspector Uhler of the government steamboat inspection service.

The federal steamship inspection service was awaiting the arrival of the Titanic for examination to see that she complied with the English law with regard to life and other equipment. If the vessel had been of American register it would have been obliged to have lifeboats or life rafts containing 23,470 cubic feet or accommodations for 2,347 persons.

STAGGERED AT LOSS.

Lloyds Says Insurance on Titanic Was Well Distributed.

London, April 16.—The underwriters at Lloyds were staggered at the loss of the Titanic, but it is declared that the insurance on the lost vessel is so evenly distributed that none of the underwriters are likely to be hard hit.

The exact amount of the property loss was hard to ascertain today. Underwriters stated that they could not say accurately what securities were on board the ship as yet. It was generally estimated, however, that with the cargo, the Titanic would represent a value of approximately $12,500,000. Of this total $750,000 was retained by the White Star company at its own risk and the balance was placed on the insurance market in London, Liverpool, Hamburg and elsewhere.

Mr. Carlisle Talks.

Alexander Carlisle, lately chief designer for Harland and Wolff, the ship builders and the designer of both the Titanic and Olympic in the course of an interview today said:

"I never thought there was such a thing as an unsinkable ship. When the news came that the Titanic was sinking by the head I thought it likely that she would reach port. The fact that she sank within four hours after the impact with the ice indicates that her side was torn out."

As to the number of boats carried by the Titanic Mr. Carlisle said:

"I am of the opinion that the large ships of the present day do not carry anything like a sufficient number of boats, but until the board of trade and the governments of other countries require sufficient boats to be carried ship owners cannot afford such extra top-weight. As a matter of fact, both the Titanic and the Olympic were fitted with davits designed for and capable of carrying four times the number of boats actually fitted in the ships when they went to sea. Although a large margin was then left I think I am correct in saying that the Titanic carried fifty per cent over the number of boats required by the board of trade rules."

Mr. Carlisle also thought that the board of trade should make it compulsory to close the water tight compartment doors of ships between sunset and sunrise.

CONTRACT IS SUBMITTED.

City Officials Send Agreement to the Pennsylvania Company.

A contract for grade separation west of Calhoun street, including street vacation and the construction of a new passenger station was sent today by the board of public works to the Pennsylvania company. After it has been read over a conference will be held if it is found that one is necessary.

The board took up this afternoon the proposition to vacate the alley between Broadway and Van Buren between Main and Berry. The ground is wanted for the extension of St. Joseph's hospital.

HEAVY RAINS NOW ADD TO SUFFERING

Cloudbursts Fall for Two Days on Flooded Southland.

MANY ARE DESTITUTE

Tallulah, La., April 16.—Heavy rains, almost of cloudburst proportion, which have fallen here during the past two days, have intensified the already terrible condition of the flood sufferers, many of whom have been without shelter and in some instances without food, since waters from the Mississippi invaded this territory Saturday and Sunday. Freight cars, attics, upper stories, lodge rooms, the court house, high school building and even the jail are being occupied by the unfortunates who have been driven from their homes.

Over 2,000 negroes who were on the levees for a distance of twenty miles south of the Salem crevasse, many of them without food for more than 24 hours, were rescued yesterday.

Three hundred persons are still marooned at Sondheim. Boats are being assembled and today the refugees will be taken to places of safety.

Mrs. George Keller, of Quebec, La., while attempting to save some corn in a crib, was bitten by a huge rattle snake. It is not believed she can recover.

KIDNEY TROUBLES

CAN BE AVOIDED.

You cannot afford to neglect the slightest kidney ailment—it's hazardous to do so.

The poisonous waste material must be separated from the blood and if the kidneys become weakened this is impossible.

That means a poisoned system.

That's why neglect means trouble—the ailment becomes chronic and results in Rheumatism or Bright's Disease.

NYAL'S Kidney Pills

Assist the kidneys in their function, strengthen them and prevent the ailment from becoming chronic. They cleanse the blood and increase the circulation and supply the proper nourishment to body tissues.

They are a kidney medicine—intended for that and nothing else.

HELWAGENS IN A LOT OF TROUBLE

They Injured Mrs. Lydia E. Auger's House and Are Held for It.

SUIT FOR DAMAGES

Elmer and Edward Helwagen, who conduct a garage at Circleville, Ohio, got into a lot of trouble today when an automobile driven by the latter, struck Mrs. Lydia E. Auger's horse at Clinton and Wayne streets, injuring the animal so badly that it had to be killed.

They were taken to police headquarters, where Edward was placed under arrest for driving without a license tag and in the meantime Vesey & Vesey entered suit against them and Sheriff Reichelderfer took their machine on a writ of attachment.

The suit was filed on behalf of Mrs. Auger to recover damages for the killing of her horse, which she valued at $175. The machine had been purchased in Chicago and the brothers were driving it home and were without a license tag of any kind.

They were driving south and the Auger delivery wagon was on its way north. Both attempted to turn at Wayne street and the collision followed. One of the horse's legs was broken in two places and it had to be shot.

The brothers probably concluded before they got through with their troubles to name their new auto the Helwagen.

DECRY INROADS OF SOCIALISM

Rabbis Say Jewish Workingmen Are Embracing It as a Creed.

WILL STUDY PROBLEM

Baltimore, Md., April 16.—The inroads of socialism among the working class of Jews was deplored in reports and speeches made at the conference of Rabbis here today.

A committee which has made an investigation of this subject for the past year made a report in which the prediction was made that the tendency to break from the synagogues and all forms of religion was growing less among the working classes than some time ago; although Rabbi R. J. Coffee, of Pittsburg, said he was convinced that more than ever before socialism is being embraced as a creed by Jewish workingmen who are dissatisfied with existing conditions.

The committee suggested that open conferences be held to study the relation of laboring people to the synagogue so that the problem could be met and dealt with by their congregations.

IDA FALL FALLS AND FILES SUIT

Hotel Employe Seeks $10,000 Damages of Proprietor of Anthony.

WAS BADLY SCALDED

Ida Fall, formerly employed as a checker in the kitchen at the Anthony hotel, entered suit in the circuit court today to recover $10,000 damages from Hugh Keenan on account of injuries sustained November 11, 1911.

She alleges that she was passing through a hallway in the basement to reach an elevator used by employes in going to and from their rooms on the top floor and that she stepped on the covering to a vat of boiling water. The covering was loose and tipped, plunging her left leg into the water.

She says she was so badly scalded that she was in a hospital nine weeks and that she is permanently injured. McAdams & Hartzell and Judge John H. Aiken filed the suit.

Failed to Support Her.

Clara Harris charged in her divorce complaint against Amos O. Harris that they separated in July, 1909, after a married life of seven years because he drank too much and was not able to support her and their two children. She asks the custody of the children.

Corkwell Case Dismissed.

The case against Benjamin T. Corkwell, motorman on the limited car that caused the Kingsland wreck, has been dismissed in the Wells circuit court. The case against Conductor Dell Wilson was taken to Jay county on a change of venue and will also be dismissed.

In the superior court today Bernard and William Borkenstein asked a restraining order to prevent Robert A. Winkelman from engaging in the sale and manufacture of a certain herb tea. They allege in their complaint that Winkelman entered into partnership with them and agreed that he would not make the remedy for any other concern than the firm with which he had contracted. They say he is out of the firm and is making the tea and offering it for sale. Judge R. P. Dreibelbiss filed the suit.

Articles Are Filed.

Articles of incorporation of the Indiana Electric Appliance company were filed with the county recorder today. The capital stock is $25,000, and the incorporators are William L. Moellering, Charles E. Pranger, Arthur Lepper, Henry Kiebe and Charles F. Prange.
